PDA Announces Pseudorabies Eradication Program, Sets Goals

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Department of Agriculture on Thursday announced the start of a program to eradicate pseudorabies in swine in Pennsylvania by mid 2000.

The announcement and introduction of the eradication program was made during a regular meeting of the state Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission at the state Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

Pseudorabies is not related to the disease of rabies. It does not directly affect humans.

According to the PDA, pseudorabies is a viral infection of swine that primarily affects their central nervous system and reproductive organs. It causes the industry great losses through the loss of feed efficiency and production.

State Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr. introduced the program during the commission meeting which was attended by a variety of individuals and representatives of groups with an interest in swine production and regulation.

Essentially, the bottom line of what Hayes said was that the eradication program goal is to move Pennsylvania's swine industry into a position to gain all market advantages and values inherent in Pennsylvania swine stock, from breeding swine to market animals.

The eradication program is a cooperative effort between the USDA and the states and the industry.

Using an aggressive testing and monitoring program, along with possible condemnation and indeminty funding, the goal is to eradicate the disease, step-by-step.

Pennsylvania isn't in bad shape, with only one herd known to have active pseudorabies virus. As of Thursday, it was reported that herd was to have finished, or be close to finishing, depopulating.

Statewide, as of Thursday, there were only 11 herds in two counties under quarantine for pseudorabies,

Records Broken As $1,500 Paid For Gallon Of Milk

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford Co) - All records were broken as Ron Cope of Double Aught Lumber pledged his support of the Bradford County 4-H program by placing the top bid in the Bradford County Livestock and Milk Auction

As the gavel came down, $1500 was the final bid for one gallon of milk from Heather Yurkanin's supreme champion

Taking second place in the auction was milk from Craig Sheeley's grand champion Holstein, whoes milk sold for $725 and was purchased by Judson's Inc

Milk from the other champions and three baskets filled with Bradford County Products were also sold bringing that sale average to $487 on 12 lots

According to the rules of the milk auction, one half of the money that is generated through the sale of the milk will go to the owner of the animal while the other half is divided between the county 4-H or FFA program and the member's club or chapter

Volunteer Auctioneer Bob Shaylor opened the bidding on the market lambs, steers and hogs as well

Stephen Laudermilch's champion steer tipped the scales at 1296 and was purchased for $ 70 per pound by Columbia Cross Roads Equipment The reserve champion steer weighed in at 974 pounds and was purchased by the Laurel Hill Veterinary Clinic for $ 95 The average on Five steers was $ 76

Thirteen lambs crossed the auction block with the price per pound ranging from a low of 1 45 and a high of $3 Eight of the lambs were donated back to the 4-H program and were resold The money from the second sale of the GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Gettysburg Area High School is one of many "test sites" for a new agricultural education partnership.

Already some of the results of this test site for next-century ag education look positive.

Months ago, a program called Vision for Pennsylvania Agricultural Education was funded with a $55,000 grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Education. The project is being conducted in partnership with Penn State University, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association.

Administered through the Solanco School District, the program has reached out to Chambersburg, Gettysburg, Shippensburg, Berlin Brothersvalley, Crawford Central School District (Cochranton Junior and Senior High Schools), and Conewago Valley school

Cornell Researchers Find Bread-Based Diet Good For Beef Cattle

ITHACA, N.Y. -- For beef producers looking for new ways to economically and efficiently feed their cattle, Cornell University animal researchers have shown the effectiveness of an unusual diet Let them eat bread -- and other commercial bakery leftovers and scraps

The Cornell researchers say that the steers' ruminant stomachs can digest feed that includes stale bakery products more efficiently than high-energy, corn-based diets because the baked goods have already been processed.

"It surprised us that bakery waste was more efficient than corn We found there was no difference in the meat quality," says Pablo J Guiroy, [pronounced Ga-ROY] a Cornell graduate student from Argentina, who will complete his master's degree in the animal science deoartment at Cornell in October.

Guiroy presented his findings

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds varied from light and typical of mid-week activity to instances good. Offerings of 3 pound and larger sizes were adequate to short. Smaller sizes were ample and accumulating at some points. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were often "lighter" than desired. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 72 to 86 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady and centered mainly on the heavier weighs. In the parts complex, the bulk of items were generally noted as in good balance to closely cleared.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids finished mixed on private estimate of lower corn crop and indications that wheat carry out would be over 1 billion bushels. Good crop conditions and favorable growing weather, however, continued to add pressure to grain and soybean bids. Wheat mixed. Corn steady to 2 cents lower. Sorghum 7 cents lower. Soybeans 7 to 10 cents lower. Export sales have been quite small this week for all commodities and with the report that Jordan canceled its' tender for US wheat, bids moved lower. Spring wheat, corn and soybean crops are all looking good and the weather has been very agreeable to the growing stages. A private source reported today that the corn crop estimate was cut from 9.455 billion bushels to 9.411 billion bushels. However, they increased the estimate for wheat carry out to over 1 billion bushels, limiting losses in wheat bids.

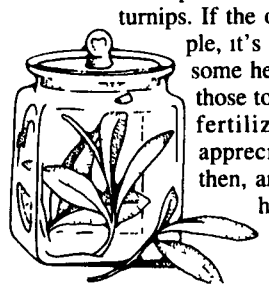
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

AUGUST 10-16, 1998

ASSUMPTION, AUG. 15.

DOG DAYS END

August 11 sees the end of those hot and sultry Dog Days, which commenced July 3 and were named for the Dog Star, Sirius. Summer's not quite over, however, so there's still time for a late-summer planting of heat-tolerant crops like bush beans, lettuce, kale, and turnips. If the onion tops are starting to topple, it's time to begin harvesting. Dry some herbs now for winter use. Keep those tomatoes well watered and well fertilized. Chrysanthemums, too, appreciate a little feeding now and then, and don't let up on your deadheading of perennials, if you expect flowers to continue to bloom for you.



Summer is a seemly time.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ If you don't like the heat, get out of the kitchen. (Eat out!)

DILLY BEANS

4 pounds fresh green beans
8 teaspoons dill seed
4 teaspoons mustard seed
16 cloves garlic
5 cups white vinegar
5 cups water
1/2 cup salt

Wash, trim, and cut beans to fit into pint jars. Rinse 8 jars in hot water. Fill each with ½ pound of beans, 1 teaspoon each of dill and mustard seeds, and 2 halved cloves of garlic.

Boil together the vinegar, water, and salt and pour over the beans, filling to within ½ inch of the jar tops. Process in a boiling water bath, tighten lids, and let cool. Store for 2 weeks.

Makes 8 pints.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If on St. Lawrence's Day (Aug. 10) the weather be fine, fair autumn and good wine may be hoped for.

When the cat scratches the table legs, a change is coming.

If swallows touch the water as they fly, rain approaches.

When dogs eat grass, it will be rainy.

OPINION

Limit Risk Only

The various avenues of risk management were explored at the Ag Horizons Conference in Harrisburg last week. The day-long conference examined how changing government attitudes are affecting agriculture and how hedging, options, and the futures market can be tools to help farmers.

If these tools are to be of any value, farmers must calculate their costs. If you don't know your costs, including interest and depreciation, as well as input costs, you have no basis for locking in a profit with a futures or options contract.

Another warning should be given about the differences between hedging and speculating to farmers who are optimists by nature. If you are going to depend on the weather and other hazards to insure a crop and thus a profit in any given year, you naturally have faith that by fall, you will have a good crop. And you hope the price is good enough to bring in a profit.

Faith and hope are good qualities for the farmer.If you didn't have these qualities, you will never plant crops in the spring.

But faith and hope can also get farmers into trouble in the futures market. If you believe you will have a good, profitable crop in the fall, it is a very small step to begin to believe that you could add to your good fortune in the fall by buying additional crops on the futures market.

For example, if you have 100 acres of beans in the field that look quite promising, faith and hope may say to you, "Buy several contracts of beans on the futures market and add to your good fortune in the fall."

But now you have added 10,000 bushels of beans to your 100 acres of beans in the field. You not only become dependent on the weather and other hazards to get a good crop in the field, you have also exposed yourself to the potential wild fluctuations of prices in the bean futures market with corresponding margin calls and potential large losses. This takes farming to the most elevated point of risk possible.

So, use the futures markets and options only as risk management tools. Sell the crop you have in the field. Limit risk by locking in a profit for your crops when the market gives this profit to you. Most times this will be either before or after harvest.

Farmers don't need any more risks than they have in the day to day operation of their farms. Leave the speculative risks of the futures markets to the boys in Chicago.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Tell Ag Story

Recent report from the council for Agricultural Science and Technology (CAST) stated "The U.S. population is complacent with the quantity of their food supply, but less so with its quality Having the best food supply in the world is not good enough; they worry increasingly about food safety and nutritional content as well as the water quality They are environmentally minded but lack knowledge about agricultural production practices. They want some regulation in the food production/safety arena but also want some regulation in the food production/safety arena but also want to remain internationally competitive." Their image of modern agriculture comes from environmentalists, animal rights groups, vegetarians and governmental agencies. Individual farmers can not fight the battle alone. This is why farmers of each commodity need to unite to solve problems together and educate people on the increased awareness, concern and action farmers have taken on the environment, food safety and animal welfare.

To Look At Dairy Options

Options are the right to buy a futures contract. By purchasing put options you are placing a minimum price you receive for milk. If the price goes up you still receive the higher price but if the price goes down you have locked in your price. Buying options is similar to insurance. The more price protection you buy, the higher the premium cost. You hope milk prices never drop, but if prices do drop drastically, then you are thankful you brought the protection Now is the time to start studying options and how they may fit into your operation.

To Participate in USDA Dairy Options Program

USDA this fall will be conducting a Dairy Options Pilot Program (DOPP) in 7 states. Six counties have been selected in each state. Pennsylvania is one of the selected states with Lancaster, Bradford, Franklin, Crawford, Berks and Chester counties being named pilot counties. Dairy farmers in these counties will soon be receiving a letter from the Federal Risk Management Agency announcing the DOPP. This is an educational program on the use of Basic Formula Price (BFP) option contracts as a means to establish a floor price for milk. The intent of this program is to encourage farmers to learn more about dairy options by actually using them. If you have any questions about this program, contact the county extension office in one of the pilot counties.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE REAL SLUGGARDS

August 9, 1998

Background Scripture:
Proverbs 6:6-8; 10:4-5; 13:4; 15:19; 18:9; 20:4; 24:30-34

Devotional Reading:
2 Thessalonians 3:16-23

My dictionary defines sluggard as a person who is "habitually inactive or lazy."

I must say that I cannot recall encountering anyone who fits this definition. Of course, I have known some who are harder workers than others I have known some people who get lazy streaks from time to time, myself included. But I have never known anyone who is "habitually inactive or lazy."

This could simply be an accident of chance, geography or culture I grew up among the Pennsylvania Germans, a culture founded on industriousness and hard work But I suspect that these two attributes are found that comprise the people of the USA If we have bought into any value from our Christian heritage, it is the work ethic

That does not mean that all of us work hard or that there are not sluggards among us. Nor does it mean that the work ethic is as highly prized and practiced as it once was. It is difficult to make accurate comparisons with now and then. Then, people worked longer and harder because they had to

WORK & SLOTH

If we catalogue the teachings of Proverbs concerning work and sloth there is almost nothing in them that 99 percent of us would likely deny or reject

- The preparedness of the ant is an example to the lazy person
- Those who plow, plant and harvest when the season is right are prudent
- People who are slack in their work are destructive to society
- The path of the lazy person is filled with thorns
- Diligence is rewarded
- Laziness results in poverty.

I saved that one until last, because I believe there is more to poverty than laziness. Some people are poor because they are lazy. Yet, some of the hardest workers I have known were people who were still poor despite their industry. For them, diligence was unrewarded. I also have known people who are quite affluent without being industrious. Some of them have never done a day's work. Others were good workers but unwise managers of money.

I have known people who know only how to work hard. They do not take time from their work to spend quality time with their families, help neighbors or be good citizens. There are people who are dedicated only to work and fail to take care of themselves physically, mentally and spiritually. Some people take pride in working themselves into bad health or even death.

SLOTH & POVERTY

Many today believe that people are poor because they are lazy. But if we all really believed in the sacredness and necessity of work, why would we fail to provide enough jobs that earn a basic living for those who want to work? At the same time we are taking people off the welfare rolls, we are also cutting the number of jobs available. "Downsizing" gives the lie to what we say we believe. It is hypocritical to uphold the work ethic and then for the sake of a better profit take away that opportunity

I see a lot of "HELP WANTED" signs around Dallas. But, when I have checked into these, I find few, if any, of them paying enough to feed, clothe and shelter the employee. The jobs available may be located too far away from the willing worker In many cities there is inadequate public transportation or none at all. To operate a car to get to and from work—purchase, maintain, insure and run it—costs more than many employees can afford. Is it any wonder that people who face barriers such as these grow cynical and remain in poverty, often on welfare and/or into crime, living on the thinnest margin of life?

Maybe the real "sluggards" are those of us who believe in work but do not believe in it sufficiently to make our system work at the American Society of Animal Sciences regional meeting at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass., on June 29, and he will present them at the society's annual meeting in Denver during the last week in July.

Cornell Researchers

He and his Cornell colleagues studied 120 steers at Cornell's Teaching and Research Center in Dryden, N.Y. The other researchers were Danny G. Fox and Donald H. Beermann, professors of animal science, and Deborah J Ketchen, manager of beef research at the Cornell Teaching and Research Center.

"Ruminant animals play a valuable role in recycling nutrients from human food processing, says Fox. "Bakery waste is one of those by-products where ruminants can play a major role in recycling."

Bread and other bakery products were mixed with regular feed. The corn-based finishing diet for the beef steers was 18 percent corn silage, 63 percent corn grain, 9 percent hay, about 7 percent soybean meal and about 3 percent minerals. By comparison, the bread-based diet was 18 percent corn silage, 15 percent corn grain, 55 percent bread, 7 percent hay, about 3 percent soybean meal and about 2 percent minerals.

Guiroy says the bread-based diet does not affect quality or yield-grades of the beef, and the researchers were aiming for Choice Quality grade beef in 80 percent of the cattle. The beef was tested for tenderness with Warner-Bratzler shear force measurements, which determine how much force is needed to cut meat.

The steers fed on the bakery diet were managed according to Cornell's animal use and care guidelines, and were slaughtered at a packer in Pennsylvania

A panel of tasters reported no difference in taste of steaks from the animals fed the bread-based diet compared with meat from animals fed on a traditional corn-based diet. According to the researchers, beef producers in New England have been feeding bakery waste to some cattle for years However the Cornell research documents for the first time the net energy value of bakery waste and its effects on meat quality

The title of Guiroy's talk at the Amherst meeting is "Effects of Feeding Bakery Waste on Performance and Meat Quality in Beef Steers. " Cornell's animal science department is part of the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

4-Year-Old Is Grand At York Holstein Show

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Senior champion, grand champion, best bred and owned showered on the homebred 4-year-old that won the annual York County Holstein Show, July 29 at the York Fairgrounds.

For show champion Dar-Dale Skybuck Melissa and her owner-exhibitor Daphne Doll, the selection by judge Don Cook made it two-for-two, since the fancy, framey cow had been named supreme of the York 4-H show one day earlier.

Melissa, a daughter of Hanoverhill Skybuck and homebred in the Doll family's Dar-Dale herd, is scored VG-87 with second lactation records over 20,000 pounds of milk.

Daphne, 18, is the daughter of Dale and Darla Doll, Glen Rock, and the youngest of the four Doll children who have exhibited the family's cattle for many years at regional Holstein shows. In late August, she is to begin her freshman studies at Penn State in dairy science.

Reserve senior and grand champion was El-Dor B Drew Sonja, the junior 3-year-old exhibited by Beshore Farms, the Jed and Sue Beshore family, New Cumberland. Sonja, best-uddered animal in the six-head class in her age category, is sired by Hilltop-Hanover-B-Drew-ET and was bred by Richard Crider, Chambersburg.

Junior champion honors went to the first and second-placed summer yearlings, both bred and exhibited by Coredale Holsteins, the Rodman and Jane Thompson family, East Berlin.

Earning the purple award was Coredale Jed Simba, also named the best junior animal bred and owned for owners Rod and Jane Thompson. Granddaughter Amy Trimmer, East Berlin, exhibited the reserve junior winner Coredale Mandel Franny.

Sunnybend Farms, York, owned by Tom and June Boyer, claimed the pair of purple banners honoring the show's premier breeder and exhibitor. Their accomplishments to garner high points in both banner competitions included first- and second-place senior 2-year-olds, first senior 3-year-old, first 6-year-old, and several second-placings.

The special Kiddie Klass for very young exhibitors is a proven favorite with the crowd each year at the York Holstein show, and, as always, drew enthusiastic applause. This year's winner was Amanda Thompson, daughter of Roy and Tammy Thompson, Wellsville. Also competing were Cameron Knight, Kyle Miller and Aaron Doll.

"I tried to hold her head up and I walked her every day," were two of the techniques the 6-year-old Amanda explained for working with her March-born calf, named Donita. Amanda celebrated her seventh birthday two days later, so the trophy and several awards were an early birthday surprise for the Kiddie Klass veteran.

Gettysburg High School districts.

Several prominent leaders in the districts have taken a pro-active role in starting up the initiative to help restructure ag education in the classroom into the next century.

One of them is Gettysburg. The person behind the implementation of the program is Thomas Oyler, ag science instructor.

According to Mimi Lufkin, project director of the Vision for Pennsylvania Agricultural Education Project who spoke at an ag update meeting in Harrisburg in April, all students need to have a "basic understanding of agriculture so they can make informed decisions as consumers and citizens."

She cited the increasing use of technology in agriculture — and schools need to keep up with those developments.

Oyler has used the Reinventing Agricultural Education for the Year 2020 Project to guide the actual Vision for Agricultural Education Program.

Oyler established a group of 21 stakeholders who have agricultural backgrounds. The stakeholders are graduates of the program, parents, board members, business people, school administrators, and farmers.

So far, three local meetings have been conducted to help iron out the plan for the school.

The first meeting overviewed the middle and high school program. The second reviewed program objectives, funding, recruitment and retention of students, technical preparation, and included a discussion of FFA-related programs. The third meeting reviewed observations from visitations to Penn Manor and Solanco high schools. A discussion was held on what kind of programs to offer students in the future.

In a story in The Enlightener, a publication from Penn State's Center for Professional Personnel Development, Department of Agricultural and Extension Education, Oyler noted that he believes the Reinventing Ag Education for the Year 2020 Project gave his stakeholders "the ability to think futuristically.

"The exercises provided (for) them the opportunity to think beyond the world as they see it now."

Vision for Ag Education Project assisted Oyler by providing him with a 12-step plan. Oyler believes four positive things have emerged:

- 21 people have become interested in the ag program.

- Potentially one half of the stockholders serve on an advisory committee.
- The project demonstrates to the school board that a diverse community has great interest in the program.
- A needed change in the curriculum's contest, delivery, and scope is obtainable.

Oyler provided other suggestions that helped his efforts succeed. They included calling stakeholders not present at the meetings to update them on the progress of the group, limiting the meetings to exactly two hours, making sure the stakeholders receive a letter including the time, place, and objectives of the meeting, scheduling the meetings in the fall and winter because of fairs, summer vacations, and other events, and to keep the group focused and on task.

Said Mimi Lufkin, Vision for Pennsylvania Agricultural Education Project director, one of the driving factors creating the need for this project was "the increasing urbanization of the population and with it the decreasing contact of a majority of the population with agriculture.

"We all eat food and we are all directly impacted by ag, and we all need to be educated," she said.

Chester Holstein Calf Given

Andra Stoltzfus, won the give-away calf at the Chester County Holstein club picnic last Friday. The event was held at the farm of Amos E. Stoltzfus family at Honey Brook. Anyone aged 6 to 16 who attended the picnic could sign-up for the free drawing.

The calf, a rgistered Holstein, came from the herd of Harold and Glenn Ranck. The sire is Duster and the dam a VG 26,000m Calypso daughter. Purina also supplied a 6 months supply of feed for the calf.

In the judging annual judging contest, Christy Guest won the youth division; Kathy Guest won the women's division; and a three-way-tie in the men's division was shared by Tom Lapp, Steve Stoltzfus, and David K. SToltzfus. In the photo, Harold and Andrea show the calf.

PDA Announces Psuedorabies Eradication Program and all of those were expected to be released from quarantine by the end of the year.

According to information presented to the commission, there were five breeder herds and five feeder herds in Lancaster County under quarantine. There was one feeder herd in Dauphin County.

That puts Pennsylvania at Stage III in the program.

In order to achieve the next stage, or Stage IV, the pseudorabies-free status of the state has to be maintained for 12 months with no new infections found.

After officially reaching Stage IV, another disease-free 12 months is to be required in order to achieve the pseudorabies-free status of Stage V.

According to a PDA press release, there are 27 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands which already have achieved Stage V in the national testing program.

There are five states in Stage IV.

Since taking the job as agriculture secretary, Hayes has been actively involved in promoting Pennsylvania agricultural commodities. He has assisted established industries and businesses with expanding into global markets, as well as worked with groups of startup entreprenuerial ventures of promise.

He also has worked with Gov. Tom Ridge and the Legislature to expand their knowledge of the state's agricultural resources and how it figures in the state's economic foundation.

This eradication program is seen as a way to enhance the value of the state's swine herd by increasing the ease of marketing the swine, and ultimately decreasing the cost and risk of doing business here.

During the meeting, Hayes praised the wisdom of Gov. Ridge and the members of the General Assembly for making the funding available to pursue animal disease control and eradication programs.

"Heretofore, (the state has) not been very robust with the dollars for eradication of animal diseases," he said. But that is changing. He said the General Assembly allocated money to fight avian influenza (which seems to be under control for the time being), and in the last budget increased the state indemnity funding from $50,000 to $250,000, specifically in anticipation of the pseudorabies eradication program project.

Hayes said that means that the mandate from the Legislature is clear, and so is the support of Gov. Ridge.

Hayes said that, around the world, the presence of pseudorabies in a herd or an area is one of the first pieces of information potential buyers of swine want to know.

He said that, when he has the opportunity to promote Pennsylvania's swine industry around the nation or abroad, instead of just saying, "Yes, this or that herd is pseudorabies free," he would like to say, "The whole state is pseudorabies free."

Dr. John Enck Jr., director of the state Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services since early June, is project officer for the program.

The rest of the project team includes Dr. Phillip Debok, Dr. Zoann Parker, Dr. Bruce Schmucker, Dr. Graham Purchase, Dr. John Roberts, Dr. David Henzler and USDA's Dr. Amy Nesselrodt.

The project plan for Pennsylvania's eradication program was developed by the project team. The plan is a spiral bound document that includes state pseudorabies regulations and the national program regulations, as well as the outline of specific objectives in order to achieve goals.

According to the plan's impact statement, "Pseudorabies has been a serious clinical disease of swine in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in the United States. The economic viability of the swine industry is harmed by the affliction.

"Pennsylvania is surrounded by states, which are in an advanced stage of pseudorabies control. The lack of an aggressive control program has hampered the export of pigs, especially feeder pigs, from Pennsylvania.

"Additionally, certain testing requirements for movement within Pennsylvania will be eased with elimination of pseudorabies. Eradication of the disease may eventually elminate the need to vaccinate for pseudorabies, a procedure which has been necessary and costly."

The plan, considered a working guideline for the program implementation, subject to future revision as the project accomplishes goals, also outlines eight goals and objectives:

- Release all currently quaranted herds within nine months of the program implementation.
- Attain Stage IV (surveillance) Status in the State-Federal-Industry Pseudorabies Program within 12 months of program implementation. (If additional herds are discovered, this may be delayed until approximately 12 months after discovery of the last infected herd.)
- Attain Stage V (free) Status ... within 12 months of attaining Stage IV Status.
- Maintain current surveillance program until Pennsylvania receives "free" status.
- Conduct area testing for all high-risk herds (continuous flow feed lots and herds within a 2-mile radius of previously infected herds).
- Eliminate infection from newly identified infected herds within 6 months. Consideration will be given to condemnation and depopulation within 15 days if necessary to advance to Stage IV.
- Establish additional surveillance measures as described in the National Program Standards.
- Maintain Stage V Status by documenting continued compliance with National Program Standards.

After the announcement, some concerns were expressed by producer representatives that the condemnation and indemnity aspect still remains an unanswered question. Of concern is the difference in value between breeding stock and market stock.

Habecker Wins Best Bred, Owned Contest

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Amy Habecker of Lebanon, a former Lebanon County dairy maid, on Tuesday won the annual Lebanon County Fair Best Bred and Owned 4-H dairy contest.

In fact, the top three contestants have all been involved in the Lebanon County dairy princess promotion program, either having served as dairy maids or as the younger "li'l dairy miss" position.

Whether involvement in the dairy princess program was in someway helpful in winning the contest, if it indicates character and dedication to the dairy industry that carries into other aspects of their lives, or if is only coincidence, it seems more than coincidence that the three winners have been involved.

The Lebanon County Best Bred and Owned dairy contest is unique.

It was started several years ago as a way to more directly reward the efforts of youth with dairy project animals, in addition to the regular dairy breed constest considerations, in which the physical animal condition is the main judging point.

Top quality animals can be purchased by those with enough money, but the best bred and owned competition is designed to reflect the effort, dedication and abilities of the youth to their project animals and to developing their own skills.

The contest is a point-accumulation contest that puts only a maximum of 20 percent of the scoring on the quality of the animal.

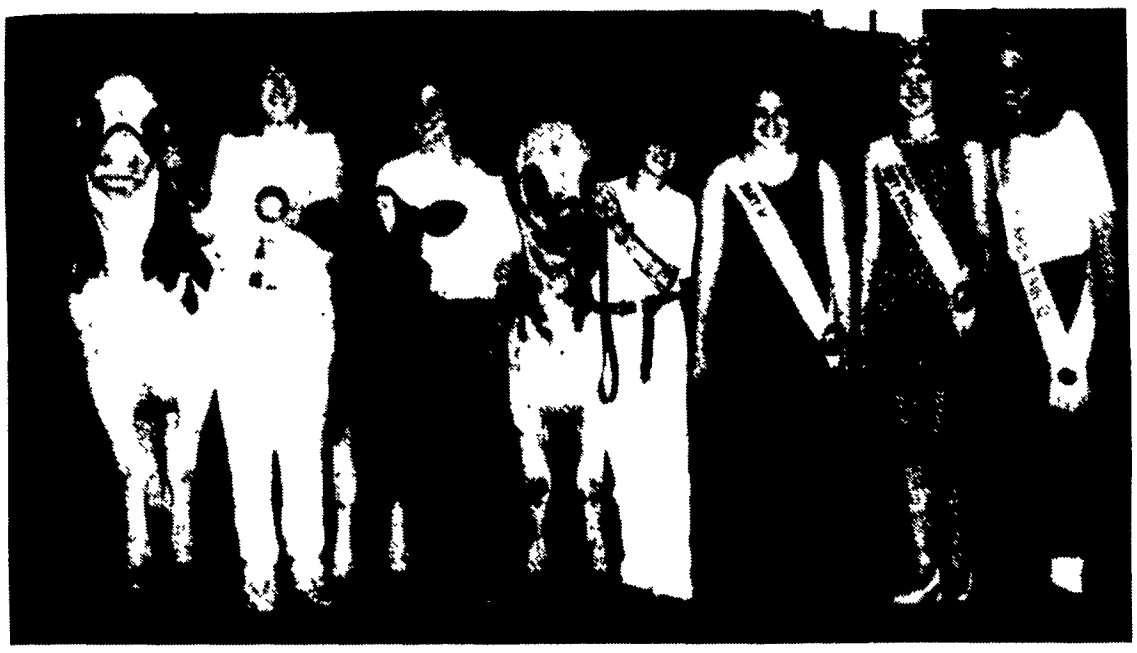
Out of a total possible 50 points, Habecker had 49.

The contest values the quality of the contestant's 4-H project book with a possible 20 points; fitting awards for 10 points; showmanship awards for another 10 points; and 10 points for the quality of the animal.

This year, a record 12 contestants participated.

The contest rewards each of the top three finishers with an $100 U.S. Savings Bond.

Taking second and third places, respectively, were Sarah Krall of Lebanon, and Jennifer Maulfair of Jonestown.



From the left, in order from first through third place, the winners of the Lebanon Area Fair Best Bred and Owned dairy contest, who hold the halter of their respective project animals, are Amy Habecker, Sarah Krall, and Jennifer Maulfair. They are joined by Lebanon County Dairy Maid Laura Blauch, county Dairy Princess Heidi Finicle, and Lebanon Area Fair Queen Rebecca Shirk.

Edenbrook Holsteins Hosts Picnic

MARSHA ANN CHESS
Mercer Co. Correspondent

KNOX (Clarion County) — Highlights of the 1998 Pennsylvania Holstein Association's Summer Picnic included meeting KED Mark Justine and viewing a parade of her descendents.

This year's summer picnic was held at Edenbrook Holsteins home of Keith and Debbie Decker and family. The farm is located just outside of Knox in Clarion County, Approximately 255 Holstein enthusiasts turned out to enjoy the event and see the Edenbrook herd for themselves.

Picnickers were able to visit the 14-year-old Justine in the barn and learn more about her. Justine is classified Very Good-88 and has produced more than 292,000 pounds of milk to date. She has several sons in A.I. including Juror, Jurist, and Jubal; and her descendents are being milked all over United States and throughout the world.

After lunch, the Dick Smith from ABS Global and Keith Decker introduced some of the Justine's descendents to the crowd and gave them a sneak peak at the future of the Justine cow family. Smith also talked about Justine's impact on the Holstein breed through her sons, daughters, and granddaughters.

John Wadsworth, a New York Holstein breeder, who works with Holstein World On-Line, spoke on the Internet and Holsteins on the worldwide web. He gave the audience tips on where to find dairy related sights and information and talked about how Holstein breeders could use the Internet to promote their animals.

Also, Ken Rainy of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association introduced Shawn McMahon, the new field representative for Ohio and Western Pennsylvania. McMahon talked briefly about animal identification and the new American I.D. system.

Lebanon Fair Market Livestock Sale Totals $98,115

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The July 31 sale of 245 market livestock entered in the Lebanon Area Fair totalled $98,115.

The week-long Lebanon Area Fair culminates with the sale of market livestock animals of three species entered by youth in competition during the Fair.

The sale of the grand and reserve grand champion hogs, beef and lambs starts the annual sale, followed by the sale of the rest of the animals.

To start the sale, all the youth selling animals gathered in the sale ring and, after an announcement by Brian Kreider, applauded the support of the community in advance of the sale.

The applause was a "thank-you" gesture in advance, and in recognition of the years of support that has come from the community, during economically difficult years as well as during more prosperous times.

Auctioneer for the event was Harry Bachman, of Annville, who has been involved with the county and state youth livestock sales for years, as volunteer auctioneer and promoter of the program.

According to Carol Kreider, who for years has volunteered to manage the registration and receipts from the county youth and livestock club sales, there were 145 registered bidders for last week's sale, held in the large show barn/conference center at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

She said that 136 market hogs sold for $51,250; 31 beef cattle sold for $31,625; and 78 market lambs sold for $15,240.

The Lebanon Area Fair sale of market animals is designed similar to that of the Pennsylvania Farm Show sale of market animals, and packer bids are accepted to provide market prices as a bottom line price. Registered buyers not wishing to take possession of an animal can resell it to one of the packers at the market price, effectively contributing the additional amount to the youth.

The packer bid for the market hogs was 36 cents per pound, while it was 63 cents per pound for beef.

There were three packer bids for market lambs, depending on weight. Those lambs weighing 100 pounds or more had a packer rate of 67 cents per pound; those weighing from 80 pounds up to 100 pounds received 72 cents per pound; those weighing less than 80 pounds brought 82 cents per pound (there were only a few at that weight).

The grand champion market hog was a 260-pound crossbred animal raised and exhibited by Megan Fuls, daughter of Kevin and Karen Fuls of Richland. The animal sold for $850 to First National Bank of Fredericksburg, and had a market value of $93.60, based on packer bid.

The reserve grand champion market hog was a 267-pound crossbred animal raised and exhibited by Billie Jo Atkins, daughter of Bill and Judy Atkins of Lebanon. It sold for $550 to Country Fare Restaurant in Myerstown, and had a market value of $96.12.

The grand champion steer was a 1,318-pound animal exhibited by Justin Fuls, son of Kevin and Karen Fuls, that sold for $2,300 to Hoss's Steak and Sea House of Lebanon. It had a market value of $843.52.

Heather Fuls, also a daughter of Kevin and Karen, showed the reserve grand champion steer, that sold for $1,500 to Dutchway Farm Market Inc. The 1,190-pound animal had a market value of $761.60.

The grand champion market lamb was a 125-pound crossbred animal exhibited by Kyle Fleener, son of Tim and Sarah Fleener, of Robesonia. It sold for $1,000 to Plasterer Equipment Company Inc. of Lebanon. It had a market value of $83.75. (Fleener, a consistent winner at the fair and Farm Show, also showed the supreme champion breeding sheep of the fair.)

The 125-pound reserve grand champion market lamb was exhibited by Wendy Atkins, daughter of Bill and Judy Atkins, and sold for $500 to Hoss' Steak and Sea House. It had a market value of $83.75.

In addition to the live animals, also sold were the grand champion complete market hog and the complete market lamb. The complete market animals are those judged in a competition that includes both live and carcass evaluations.

The packaged and flash frozen and wrapped champion animals are then offered for sale during the auction. The price received for those two animals was not included in the total sale price.

However, the grand champion complete market hog was exhibited by Andrew Blatt and sold for $725 to Country Fare Restaurant in Myerstown. The grand champion complete market lamb was exhibited by Blaine Brown and sold for $425 to Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank.

Young Cooperators From Four States Attend Conference

PATTON (Cambria Co.) — Young Cooperators from four states recently participated in the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative's (PCC) annual Young Cooperative Leaders Conference held at the Allenberry Resort, Boiling Springs. Thirty attendees from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and West Virginia enjoyed three days of fellowship and learning, lead by a team of former YCL participants, cooperative and industry leaders, and ag education personnel.

Conference objectives included: increasing understanding of co-op issues and affairs, develop leadership attitudes and skills, recognize and effectively use all family members, provide a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences, and provide management skills training.

These objectives were met this year through a variety of presentations and activities led by key educators. Co-op basics were presented by Robert Cohen, ACDI/VOCA; a workshop on communications and farm family relationships was led by Dr Bernie Erven, Ohio State University; a hands-on session regarding developing positive media relations was led by Francine Hogan, Genex Co-op, and Stephanie Myers, MD & VA Milk Producers. Dr. Stanley Mandel, Wake Forest University, presented a workshop on business and estate planning and developing a mission statement and operating principles for the farm. Attendees were also treated to a tour of the Land o' Lakes processing facility located in Boiling Springs.

The third day of the program was highlighted by round table discussions with cooperative leaders. Attendees had the opportunity to sit face-to-face with directors, CEOs, and co-op employees representing 14 different cooperative businesses.

Six attendees were recognized for their leadership and involvement throughout the conference and were asked to return as part of a planning

If breeding stock is valued at $400 per animal by the industry, as opposed to, for example, $50 per animal at market value, the difference is significant to the breeder who could suffer large losses because of the government's inability or refusal to acknowledge the additional value in breeding stock.

When the issue was raised during the commission meeting, it was said that when and if the need for condemnation and idemnification is apparent, that the state's consulting pseudorabies committee — that includes many representatives of the industry — will be called upon to help make those decisions.

The accuracy of the testing used was also questioned during the commission meeting, and it was reported that the tests seem to err more on the side of a false positive, which means that an additional confirmation test would be needed to ensure that a producer is not being required to depopulate a herd wrongly.

For more specific information, contact the PDA, a veterinary professional, or an industry representative.

Announces New Service

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Changes within the dairy industry seem to be coming at us faster than ever. Recognizing this, the members of the Pa. DHIA board of directores have involved themselves heavily into long range planning.

Member needs, in the long range plan, become the focus of Pa. DHIA.

Of our members' needs, the one most substantial is how to use DHIA records to increase farm profitability.

Pa. DHIA has responded to this need by announcing "Customized Dairy Consulting Services" as its newest program to dairymen.

Heading up this new service is a familiar name to many Pennsylvania dairymen. George Cudoc, who up until June 15 was the dairy farm manager at Marburger Dairy in western Pennsylvania is now part of the Pennsylvania DHIA team.

A city-born boy of Pittsburgh, he fell in love with the dairy cow and the people who tend them at a young age, while working for Pa. DHIA member Curt Wible. Money earned from this dairy allowed George to attend Penn State and earn a bachelor's degree in animal science.

Two years with a national feed manufacturer and one year as a dairy herdsman preceded his position as head of farm operations at Marburger Dairy.

During the past winter, George had the opportunity to interact with many DHIA users as he and other staff members conducted seminars on MUN testing and the use of DHIA records. His new responsibilities will include DHIA records education and farm consultation services for Pa. DHIA.

Look for details about the newest Pa. DHIA service available in the near future. In the meantime any inquiries should be directed to 1-800-DHI-TEST.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

1,000 People Attend Planting Clinic

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — In what was called a mini-farmshow by one of the participants, an estimated 1,000 people came to the two-day planting clinic Tuesday and Wedmesday, sponsored by Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc., near Rothsville. New tractors and tillage equipment working in the fields, along with seminars and exhibits by supporting agribusinesses, drew this large crowd to the Case IH dealership. Lenord Hurst, owner, said the days were planned to help customers of the dealership.

"This event serves a two-fold purpose," Hurst said. "By doing agronomy work, we have a close tie related to our business. Therefore, we get exposure to what we can do to help farmers." Without the farmers we do not exist. In the tillage we specilize in planters, and we have a lot of farmers who we serve in the business of planting.

"The event also serves to create a community social event. Friends get together, and it helps the customers to see what we are trying to do to help them."

On Tuesday, Case IH held their "Mainstreet Marketing Tour" featuring the new X-Series Case tractors as part of the event. Wednesday featured Case/Viscosity oil and lubricants and their use in machinery. Seminars included subjects such as "Fine-tuning your equipment for maximum yields" and "GPS/site specific farming/percision planting, an overview."

"It is both an event of education and customer appreciation," Hurst said.

Looking in on the exhibit area of the planting clinic.

Company representatives at the planting clinic are from left, Scott Butts and Eric Schardt, Case IH; Rick Pfautz, Ray Huber and Don Hoover, Binkley & Hurst. John Hess is in the tractor.

Druck Family to Host York Holstein Picnic

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — A calf-housing greenhouse is the latest housing addition at Airvue Farm, located on the edge of the southern York County village of Airville. The bright, airy dairy herd nursery is one of the two most recent expansions to the David Druck family's operation, which will host the annual York County Holstein summer picnic on Friday, August 14.

Airvue Farm is owned and operation by the David Druck family, which includes David, his wife Chris, and their two sons, Jesse, 18, and Mike, 16. The farm consists of a milking herd of 85 registered and grade Holsteins, plus young stock, and 600 acres of owned and rented cropland.

In 1968, David went to work for his uncle, Robert, former owner of the Airville farm. David and his uncle formed a partnership in 1972, the same year he and Chris were married. Six years later, the couple bought the farm from Robert.

The original milking facility had 24 stalls, expanded over the years to the current 32 stalls. Later improvements included pipeline installation and free stalls "stuck here and there to make do."

"Four years ago, after the really hard winter, we decided we had to do something about expansion. We just had too many cows for our space," David recalls.

That expansion began two years ago, with the construction of a 61x196-feet freestall facility with 97 stalls in three rows. The open-sided, truss-type barn is fitted with split plastic sidewall curtains for quick and variable ventilation in changing weather conditions. Three-feet-wide roof overhangs shelter the open sides from all but the worst blowing rainstorms.

A 40-feet-wide pen at one end is maintained as a calving area. Three large waterers provide plentiful access for the dairy herd to drink. And the barn's location on a flat, open area provides almost constant free-flowing air movement for ventilation.

Sand was the original – and still preferred – bedding material, but cost is prohibitive.

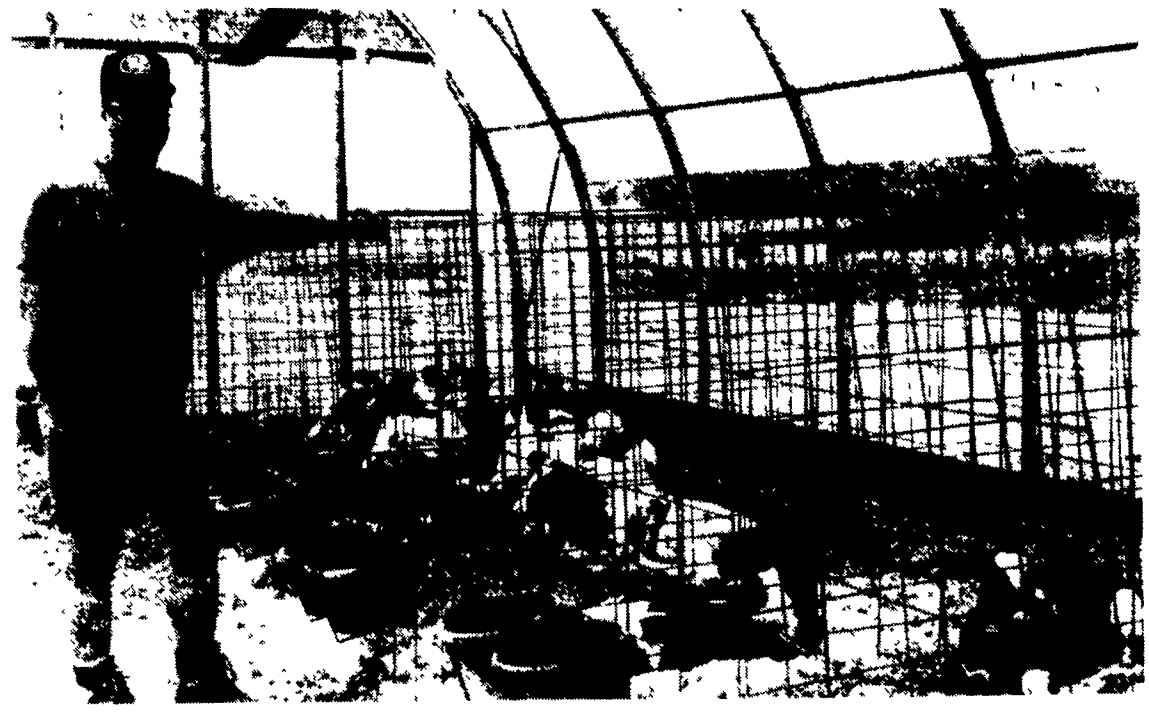
"The cows loved it; they would just lay on the sand and not want to go anywhere else," recall the Druck- But they discovered that the sand deposits which clung to the teats were hard on equipment and the cows' muzzle whiskers dragged enough sand into the waterers to create constant deposits which had to be removed.

Chopped straw is their alternate bedding choice. David runs the bedding straw through the forage harvester, storing it in bulk in a barn and bedding weekly by driving through with a wagon.

Cows are moved from the freestall barn to the head-lock rows in the original barn for milking, which is handled with six automatic take-off units. As cows on one side of the barn are being milked, the next group is being rotated into the opposite side, providing nearly continuous and efficient movement of cows.

"Our herd average production jumped between 3,000 and 4,000 pounds of milk when we moved the herd into the new housing facility," relates a pleased Chris. Today, the herd average is at 21,800 milk.

Construction of the freestall facility was planned from the beginning for future possible expansion. Both Jesse and Mike are interesting in farming, so David and Chris anticipate adding a milk parlor and expanding the herd numbers.



Dave Druck and his family are hosts for the York Holstein Association's annual summer picnic. Their Airville dairy operation features two new housing facilities, including this greenhouse calf nursery.

There are no real changes the Drucks would make to their well-planned barn after two years of use, but there have been a couple of interesting surprises. One is the method in which their herd utilizes the three large drinking waterers, one located at each end, and a third in the center, with a through-walkway for easy accessibility to the cows in all rows.

"The center waterer is the one the cows use the most," explains David. "They will come from milking into the barn, walk right by the first waterer at the end and go to the one in the middle."

Dan McFarland, Penn State facility engineering specialist, has been monitoring the Druck's watering setup since the beginning of the barn's use, so the statistical data backs up the observation with solid numbers. David says the cows drink at least one-third more of their needs from the center waterer then from either of the two end ones.

The monitoring project has also shown that, contrary to the long-held theory that a mature dairy cow drinks some 40 gallons of water each day, the Druck herd averages 25-27 gallons, per day, year round.

They are also extremely pleased with their split-sections wall curtaining, which can be rolled up or down within seconds when sudden weather changes, like blowing thunderstorms, rumble in over the Airville hills The split sectioning also allows greater flexibility for achieving maximum ventilation for cow comfort.

Just a few yards across a neatly-mown stretch of lawn from the freestall barn is an ever newer addition, the 30x60-feet calf-greenhouse nursery. Nearly spotlessly-clean calves lounge in individual pens made of hog panel wire and bedded with wood shavings. Intended population is for about 21 calves, though they are occasionally doubled up if a calf boom occurs. The plastic is 2-ply, with a layer of insulating air kept pumped between the double plastic sheets.

Shadecloth covers both ends, though during summer weather the cloth is mostly removed for ventilation and air flow A garage door at one end provides easy access for skid loader cleanout. Pens are limed between calf occupants to further limit bacterial growth

"We've had great results with our calves in this," says Chris,

Dale-Pride Holsteins Shine At Lebanon Area Fair

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — A 4-year-old Holstein owned by Dale-Pride Holsteins of Annville last week was named grand champion of the Lebanon Area Fair open division Holstein show, held at the Lebanon Fairgrounds, in North Cornwall Township.

Not only did the Dale Hostetter family show the grand champion, 4-year-old Jamesholm Ram Almond A, to win the Albert Moyer Memorial Award, but repeated a 1996 fete of capturing both grand champion titles.

The reserve grand was senior 2-year-old Dale-Pride Mandel Carmel, also named best bred and owned of the show. It was bred and owned by Dale Hostetter.

Dale and Thelma Hostetter's sons Alan, Jeffery, and Kurt Hostetter exhibited and owned some of the animals included in the farm's pedigree.

The Hostetter families involved with Dale-Pride Holsteins also were winners of the show's premier exhibitor and premier breeder awards, a dual honor that has eluded them since they won it three years in a row, from 1990-92, and several years before that. In the meantime, they have been consistently at the halter of at least one of the annual Holstein show's champion animals.

The grand champion was also the recipient of the best bred and owned award, presented by Gregg Morrissey of Morrissey Insurance Inc.

The junior champion of the show was a winter yearling, Sonnen Stardust Kaybee, bred and owned by Adam J. Sonnen, of Sonnen Holsteins in Richland. (Adam and his wife Lisa Sonnen own Sonnen Holsteins and recently served as a host for part of the state Holstein Association's junior judging school.)

Adam showed the grand champion last year, an aged cow, that was bred by his father Malcom.

The reserve junior champion of the show was a winter calf, Sonnylee Luke Leah, owned by Nelson Ebersole of Lebanon, bred by Harvey E. "Sonny" Bomgardner of Lebanon.

The judge of the show was Michael Health of Westminster, Pa.

Heath remarked that the show was challenging, and noted the depth in the classes that kept him on his toes, especially in placing some of the classes.

For years, show judges at the Lebanon open division Holstein show have noted it for its quality and size. There were almost 170 animals exhibited in the show, with very few scratched entries.

Fleener Exhibits Grand Champion Market Lamb

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The grand champion of the Lebanon Area Fair market lamb show was a crossbred animal exhibited by Kyle Fleener of Robesonia.

The win made Fleener a dual winner in both the fair's market lamb and breeding sheep competitions. Earlier last week, he showed the supreme champion breeding sheep.

Then he came back to win the market competition, vying against 77 other entries.

Judge for the show was Rod Krone.

Showing the reserve grand champion, also a crossbred animal, was Wendy Atkins of Lebanon.

The grand and reserve grand champions both weighed 125 pounds, and were the champion and reserve champion of the heavyweight class of the show's crossbred market lamb division.

The Lebanon Area Fair competition recognizes purebred market lambs, as well as crossbred animals. The champion and reserve champions of each division then compete for grand champion.

In the purebred market lamb divisions, Melissa Risser of Lebanon showed the champion Corriedale, while Laura Martin of Annville showed the reserve champion.

In the Dorset breed, Ann Leed of Myerstown showed the champion, while Angela Decker of Jonestown showed the reserve champion.

In the Hampshire breed, the champion market lamb was exhibited by Susan Leed, also of Myerstown, while Cassandra Schaeffer of Myerstown had the reserve champion.

In the Montadale breed, DeeAnna Ebling of Newmanstown exhibited the champion, while brother Derek Ebling showed the reserve champion.

In the Southdown breed, the champion was exhibited by Matthew Brown of Myerstown, while sister Katie Brown showed the reserve champion.

In the Suffolk breed, Nathan Tice of Lebanon showed the champion, while brother Joseph Tice the reserve champion.

In the rest of the crossbred market lamb division, the light heavyweight division champion was shown by Kyle Fleener, while the reserve champion was exhibited by Cassandra Schaeffer.

The chapion medium weight lamb was shown by Susan Leed, while the reserve champion was shown by Angela Decker.

The champion lightweight lamb was exhibited by Heather Fuls of Richland, while Tabitha Kohr of Myerstown showed the reserve champion.

More Tobacco Meetings Set For Farmers Who Need Marketing Help

PARADISE (Lancaster Co.) — The effort to bring Pennsylvania tobacco growers together to market their crop is continuing this week with two additional informational meetings. One is scheduled for Tuesday, August 11, at the Bart Twp. Fire House in Georgetown, and the second one is scheduled for Wednesday, August 12 at the kirkwood Produce Auction Barn, Kirkwood. According to Jane Balmer, president of the Lancaster County Farm Bureau, these meetings will start at 8 p.m.

A series of meetings have been held to inform growers what options they may have in light of the present situation. Because much of the 1997 crop is still unsold and prospects for the 1998 crop now in the fields is unclear, Balmer is leading the effort to bring growers together.

Reports of 200 or more farmers that have gathered at each of these meetings shows the interest. Lisa Eddington, managing director of the National Tobacco Council from Holly Springs, North Carolina, has been one of the presenters of information on how local growers could create a growers association for greater Lancaster County. The Lancaster County Farm Bureau is leading the effort to organize this Pennsylvania Growers Association in order to have local control of tobacco prices, better manage trading practices, and keep farmers better informed of the current issues related to their tobacco crop and its related profit centers.

Other officials who have given support to this effort are Gerry Ely, cooperative business specialist from the U.S. Department of Agriculture; Charles Dull, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, director of commodity programs, and Robert Anderson of the Lancaster County extension service.

As the lawsuits, tobacco tax issues, and settlements are ongoing, so are the opportunities for products and services that are generated as profit centers from tobacco growers. It is with this in mind that growers should attend adding that they spend up to three times longer tending calves since the environment is so much more pleasant that with individual hutches. "The calves are always in the shade; they don't have to choose between laying in the hot sun in summer or going into a little box-like enclosure."

David constructed the facility, with assistance from the supplier to install the plastic. Estimated life for the rugged, opaque material is five years, with an approximate cost of $300 to $500 to install replacement plastic.

"One thing we have learned is that you must keep the calves back far enough from the sides so that they can't chew on the plastic," David notes Holes in the plastic will flap in the slightest breeze and quickly go from a small hole to a very large gap in the cover.

The summer York County Holstein picnic being hosted by the Druck family will begin at 10 A.M.. Friday, August 14, with several classes of cattle available for judging. A prepared lunch of pork barbecue and accompaniments will follow.

Tickets for lunch are priced at $6.50 for adults, $3.25 for children ten and under. Herd Management Strategies and Budgets - Article 10

Plan to succeed, then manage to succeed

As you develop a budget for your dairy, use realistic and conservative figures Make sure your plan cash flows, even when purchased feed costs or interest rates go up or milk prices drop If it doesn't cash flow, don't fool yourself by simply changing the numbers to make them look good on paper, search for more profitable alternatives

When the numbers cash flow well enough to meet your needs, put the plan into action and make it work in real life If you have a good plan and used realistic numbers, if you keep your focus and pursue the plan with dogged determination, staying on course and meeting all the timetables, and if you make the figures work as planned, you will succeed

As you think about managing your herd, keep some of these basic thoughts in mind

1 Your dairy herd is a big investment. Cows are living, working assets They are your primary source of income You depend upon them as you go about your business of converting feed to milk So, protect your investment Protect your income base Manage your cows so they can do the job you expect of them and reward you with a decent profit.

2 Produce the maximum amount of the cheapest increment of milk possible
- Stall costs Every stall in your barn has a cost, whether filled or not We refer to these as the DIRTI 5 costs of depreciation, interest, repairs, taxes and insurance See Table 1
- Basic cow costs Once you put a cow in the stall, you incur another group of costs that are somewhat fixed They remain about the same, no matter how much milk the cow gives Some of these costs are labor, herd replacements, breeding, testing, veterinary and medical costs, dairy supplies and feed for that cow's maintenance and pregnancy if she is carrying a calf

  It takes a certain amount of milk to cover these basic cow costs The amount required will vary from farm to farm and from year to year, depending on milk prices and production costs Then you have the cost of feeding the cow to produce this first amount of break-even milk, and all we've done so far is just break even
- Least cost, maximum profit increment The next 10, 20, 30 or more lb of milk is THE CHEAPEST MILK YOU WILL EVER PRODUCE GO FOR IT! About the only cost associated with this additional increment of production is the extra feed needed to produce the extra milk, all the other costs have already been paid for! One lb of feed dry matter has the capability of producing about 2-2 5 lb of milk, that is, IF the cow is given the opportunity to do it This increment of milk production can provide a VERY GOOD RETURN on the feed dollar! Many times you do not have to feed expensive feed to get this milk just more of what the cow is already getting, assuming the ration is properly balanced
- The point of diminishing returns At some point in time, the milk response to the added feed may start to diminish, not because of the cow, but because the ration is too low in fiber and too "rich" for the rumen, the feed may be of inferior quality, or maybe we are incapable of managomg high producing cows So, monitor milk weights, feed intakes, body flesh, cow health, etc to determine where this cutoff point is for you

3 Feed profitable cows only
- Don't waste scarce and expensive feeds on unprofitable cows
- Don't short change profitable cows, even when feed is expensive (see Table 1) Push the pencil and compare incremental responses to incremental costs
- Stretch available feed supplies by culling unprofitable cows, by drying low producers off early, by not raising excess heifers, by contracting heifers or buying replacements

4 Young stock
- Young stock are your cows of tomorrow, and tomorrow's cows will never be any better than the young stock you raise or purchase
- Manage your heifers, and your cows, to protect their lungs, their gut linings, their feet and legs, and their udders so you do not seriously nor permanently impair their future performance and your profits Give them a chance to get into the profit zone

5 Cost control measures and herd management practices that will help keep the herd in the profit zone Some of these areas of management are listed below, and will be addressed in future articles
- Feeding and nutrition
- Cow comfort and housing
- Reproduction and genetics
- Herd health
- Culling and merchandising cattle
- Herd replacements
- The use of records to monitor herd situations and your progress

Table 1 Incremental Costs and Returns

Last 10 lb. (1 lb DM) (produces) (1- 2 lb Milk)		Extra costs include - Additional feed for additional milk - Costlier feeds & health care - maybe - Increased culling - maybe	REDUCED incremental profits
Next 10-?? lb. (1 lb DM) (produces) (2 - 2 5 lb Milk)		CHEAPEST MILK TO MAKE !! Basic costs have already been covered About the only extra cost is - Additional feed for additional milk	BEST incremental profits
		Feed for the first milk (to break even)	NO PROFIT
First Milk	Basic Costs	Feed for maintenance and pregnancy Labor Vet, medicine Herd replacements Breeding, testing Supplies	All income from this first milk is needed to cover all basic costs - - just to break even
		Depreciation or Rent Interest (mortgage) or Rent Repairs or Rent Taxes or Rent Insurance or Rent	The amount of milk needed to do this varies with prices and production costs

Impaired Egg Shell Quality During Hot Weather

Carol V. Gay
Professor of Poultry Science and Cell Biology

Eggshells of laying hens become noticeably more fragile during hot weather The main reason for this problem is that a main component of the eggshell, carbonate, is lost during the increased rate of breathing of hens stressed by heat The problem is even worse when both heat and high humidity occur simultaneously

From a chemical point of view eggshells are quite simple They are about 98% calcium carbonate, the same material from which limestone and most seashells are made Calcium carbonate is simply positively charged calcium ions and negatively charged carbonate ions, which readily combine when mixed together In hens this mixing occurs at the surface of the egg when the egg is in the portion of the oviduct called the shell gland Calcium is derived from food and bone whereas carbonate comes directly from the breakdown of sugars to their natural endproduct, carbon dioxide (CO_2) Most CO_2 reaches the shell gland by the blood stream and is readily converted to carbonate

Birds lack sweat glands and when they become too hot, their only means of cooling down is to pant This excessive breathing results in a more rapid loss of CO_2 than usual Because more CO_2 is breathed out, there is less in the blood stream and consequently less CO_2 is delivered to the shell gland The effects on eggshell quality are immediate

Highly productive hens tend to lay early in the day That means that most of the eggshell forms during the night, over approximately an 8-hour period Based on what is known about hen physiology, reducing heat stress specifically during the shell forming hours is likely to result in the greatest improvement in shell quality, provided that there is adequate calcium intake

Good ventilation in chicken houses will help carry away excess body heat of the hens. Recently, I learned from Penn State Agricultural Engineer, Eileen Wheeler, that she has measured a 7-10% improvement in ventilation of poultry houses by simply knocking the dust off the shutters in the ventilation system Making shutter surfaces clean and smooth would further enhance the effect

Extension Director Retires

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Jacob Guffey, Bradford County extension director, has retired from Penn State Cooperative Extension after 40 years of service.

A native of Elizabeth, Allegheny County, Guffey is an expert on dairy farming and operations. He has been deeply involved in such areas as udder health, somatic cell testing, dairy nutrition, stray voltage, and milking management.

He developed countywide programs in mastitis control and nutrition and initiated the pilot project for a statewide somatic cell testing program. In 1984, he was named extension director for Bradford County, where he supervised all cooperative extension programs.

Guffey has extensive international experience. He worked in Swaziland as a consultant to that country's extension service in 1990. In 1994, he traveled to Szepietowo, Poland to teach and adapt Penn State programs for Polish extension specialists. He also worked with the Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs to establish a viable dairy industry in the Hincesti region of Moldova in 1998.

Guffey earned a bachelor's degree in dairy science in 1955 and a master's degree in dairy management in 1957, both from Penn State. He also has continued postgraduate studies and taken courses at Penn State, Cornell University, and Mansfield University of Pennsylvania.

Guffey joined Penn State Cooperative Extension as an assistant county agricultural agent in 1958. He was promoted to associate extension agent in 1963, reached the rank of extension agent in 1975, and became senior extension agent in 1982.

Guffey lives in Towanda with his wife, Marilyn. The couple as two sons, Kenneth and David, and a daughter, Leah. They also have five grandchildren.

The reserve champion hog was shown by Joshua Ford.

Summer Barn Management Meetings Held

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — With 10-foot high corn lining the driveway of Marvin Stoltzfus family's farm off East Eby Road, The Monsanto Dairy Group, and Pennfield Feeds hosted an educational dairy event Tuesday that attracted more than 200 dairy farmers.

New management information from a herd of cows that has an over-last-year increase of 6,733 pounds of milk to a 34,350m herd average provided the basis for company representative's presentations. Dan Gard, sales representative for Monsanto, said the event was proposed to bring people together to show new management practices not well known in southeast Pennsylvania.

"We are looking at such practices as evaporative cooling, supplemental lighting, and heat stress management," Gard said. "We want to show people what is coming and what they need to consider in these low cost practices. Hopefully, we can help dairymen get to the next level of management."

Rick Stehr, eastern regional manager, Pennfield, said in his management seminars he was showing what was being done in the Stoltzfus herd with feeding rations and other little things that improve production.

"I get into farm operations where simple things like a dry water bowl or malfunctioning cow trainers are overlooked," Stehr said. "Simple things that farmers take for granted can help greatly with the overall production of the herd. Along with what we are doing to balance rations with quality forages here, Marvin also takes care of all the little things in cow comfort needed in good herd management."

Dan McFarland, multi-county extension engineering specialist, spoke on the topic of lighting and how production can be affected. Dr. Mike Lormore, DVM with Monsanto, presented ideas on how to deal with heat stress in the dairy herd. Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County dairy agent, had the topic "What's new in water?"

Gard also presented the herd management background on Posilac's milk production increases.

Monsanto continued their summer barn management meetings later in the week at Vern Umble's farm at Christiana and Lavern Martin's farm at Lebanon. Next week the program will be repeated at the farms of David K. Stoltzfus, Peach Bottom on Tuesday; Ben Lapp, Honey Brook on Wednesday; and Jay Martin, Elizabethtown on Thursday.

Marvin Stoltzfus' herd has averaged 111 pounds of milk per day for the last nine months.

Champions Named At York 4-H Dairy Roundup

YORK (York Co.) — They Ayrshire was lovely, the Brown Swiss strong-framed, the Guernsey tremendous, the Milking Shorthorn big-framed, the Jersey stylish, but the judges ultimately went with their Holstein champion in selecting the supreme champion of the York 4-H dairy roundup.

York's annual 4-H dairy exhibit was held July 28 at the York Fairgrounds with more than 125 head representing the six dairy breeds participating in the competition before judges Pat Kahler Beachy and Tom Arrowsmith

Pulled out of the final champion runoff for the supreme honor was the four-year-old Holstein entry of Daphne Doll, Glen Rock The winning animal was her homebred Dar-Dale Skybuck Melissa, VG-87 and milking over 20,000 pounds in her second lactation. Pa. State Grange Prepares For Legislative Session

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – Four speakers at the Pennsylvania State Grange's Pre-Convention Legislative Conference delivered essentially the same message; that activism ensures you have a voice in governmental affairs.

Discussing topics ranging from conservation to marketing agricultural products, the speakers said we need activism now more than ever.

"It's Important to be proactive when we address animal (nutrient) issues," Doug Goodlander of the State Conservation Commission, said. "The Grange played an active role in bringing about the nutrient management law, and we need to encourage farmers to get documented so those who question whether or not a farm is in compliance, can be told so."

Goodlander said the nutrient management law requires high density livestock and poultry operations to develop and implement an approved nutrient management plan.

"Farmers will look good as they step forward and participate in this program," Goodlander said. "It is a proactive statewide program that says you are concerned about water quality issues."

To learn if your farm is required by state law to comply with the program, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office and request Agronomy fact sheets #40 and #54.

Dr. Robert Whitlock, a veterinarian at the New Bolton center, said Johne's disease (pronounced "yo-knees") is an incurable, but controllable, disease in cattle that costs farmers money - especially those who don't even know it exists.

"Be pro-active," Whitecock said. "Be involved in testing your herd and then work to make others aware of it."

Johne's disease, Whitlock said, is in at least 25 percent of the herd population in Pennsylvania, and costs farmers $227 per afflicted cow annually.

"If you believe an indemnity program is needed," Whitlock said. "Then it is going to have to come from the grass-roots level."

Whitlock, as well as the other speakers, came to present information on issues for the Grange's Standing Committees to discuss, and possibly, generate resolutions for consideration at the convention this fall in Meadville, Crawford County.

Dr. Les Lanyon, Penn State University, detailed the Dairy Network Partnership's Milk Marketing Initiative program. The program is geared to reward dairy farmers whose operations meet environmental standards.

"We're trying to build a bridge between farmers who are environmentally minded with consumers concerned about environmental issues," Lanyon said.

Although not finalized, participating farmers would receive money from a pool based on a five-cent surcharge on every half-gallon of milk sold under the program.

Dr. Robert Whitlock, from University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center, presents information on Johne's disease.

Diane Wilson of the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) reviewed the Citizens Volunteer Monitoring Program, designed to monitor water quality in Pennsylvania. Wilson said this program is needed since the state has 84,000 miles of waterways.

"The program consists of 70-plus groups, over 10,000 individuals and 1,500 water sampling stations," Wilson said "The common bond is that these people have is a great love of water resources and the desire to see that these resources are around for future generations to enjoy."

Individuals or groups interested in learning more about this program can contact DEP at 717-787-3730 or e-mail Citizens .Monitoring@al.dep.state pa us via the Internet.

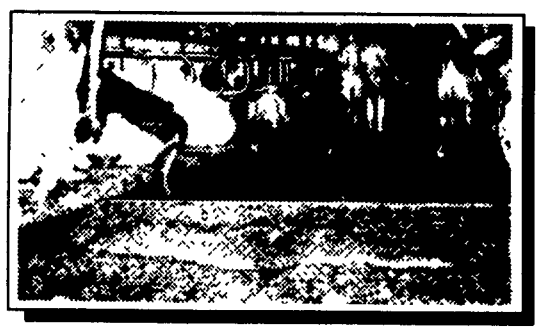
Strong, reliable, and rust resistant Berg Stalls are made for the modern dairy barn. Choose from 1.6" to 2.3" O.D. in 10 gauge Gator Shield and lengths from 4' to 7' to suit your design requirements. Berg also offers a wide variety of mounting options to meet your needs including the popular, new "head-to-head," cement-in mounting kits. Call your favorite supplier today to put Berg's 79 years of experience to work for you.



End time-consuming hand scraping or tying-up a skid loader for your daily free-stall barn cleaning chores. Let the Berg Free Stall Barn Cleaner handle the entire job for you at the push of a button. In just one pass, the Berg Free Stall Barn Cleaner scrapes clean the full width of each alley, moving the manure to the gutter or pit. The scraper then automatically tilts back to a horizontal position and returns to its parking position, ready for the next round of cleaning. Call your favorite supplier today for a no-obligation quote.

Dairy Profit Seminars a "crowd pleaser"

STANLEY, N.Y. — Grab a chair and make sure your spot is secured at Empire Farm Days for the ever-growing, crowd pleasing, Dairy Profit Seminars held daily in the Dairy Seminar Center. This year's show is on August 11, 12 and 13 at the Rodman Lott and Sons Farm in Seneca Falls, NY. Each year the dairy trade show exhibits continue to grow and expand around the Dairy Seminar Center where educational sessions are featured daily.

"Count on three days of outstanding educational dairy programs for milk producers and their employees again this year at Empire Farm Days," says Melanie Wickham, Empire Farm Days show manager. "These session look to be the best yet."

The ever-growing and popular, Dairy Profit Seminars feature today's top dairy industry personnel, both as panel members and moderators. Hear from dairy farmers themselves, who are getting the job done on their own farms day in and day out.

The Dairy Seminar Center is a spacious tent located between E. Seneca Acres and E. Make-A-Buck Avenues. Lunch and refreshments are always "on the house" for dairy producers who listen in on the sessions. Door prizes and cash drawings are offered for those in the audience. Sponsored by Agway, Inc. and coordinated by Holstein World, the sessions start at 11 a.m. each day.

Topics this year are unique and different from any you'll hear at dairy sessions for the rest of 1998.

Tuesday, August 11, Don Rogers, Farm Credit Consultant, moderates a session that features distinct ways to make a living dairying without milking 500 cows! Join in to hear from three Massachusetts producers and a Central New York producer who are "out of the mode AND doing well!"

Wednesday, Aug. 12, looks at cow comfort and the benefit of sand bedding in today's modern dairy systems. Moderated by Dave Galton, Cornell University, this session brings in dairy producers from Michigan and across New York who make the most of sand bedding. AND, their cows love it too!

Thursday, August 13, offers an unusual topic that most of us don't think about very much or even think about monitoring. Yet, it's costly and could be taking away some of your hard earned cash. It's on-farm shrink. Who is REALLY eating your feedstuffs? Hear from those who have battled wind, rodents, rain and more to prevent the loss of feed once it reaches the farm. Corwin Holtz, Western NY Agway, moderates this session with panelists from Colorado, Kansas and New York. The morning session focuses on monitoring feed once it reaches the farm. The afternoon session focuses

New 'Class' Of Dairy Royalty Trained At Seminar

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services Inc. recently welcomed the 1998-99 "class" of county dairy princesses and alternates to its annual training seminar at Lycoming College, Williamsport. Twenty-nine Pennsylvania princesses, 25 alternates, and more than 30 adult committee persons and mothers were joined by two princesses from Maryland for an intensive 3-1/2 days of training for their new role as dairy promoters

Workshops and lectures covering all aspects of the dairy industry, nutrition, media relations, public speaking, promotion techniques, and personal appearance and social conduct were led by 22 speakers. They were assisted by Pennsylvania's reigning State Princess, Nichole Meabon, Alternates Heather Riley and Eileen Murphy, and the P.D.P.P.S. coordinators and program directors.

Starting with the keynote address, "Opportunities – Unimagined, Untouched and Unlimited," by Jennifer Grimes, 1993-94 Pennsylvania Dairy Princess. The young women were encouraged to develop and use their knowledge, personalities, and individual abilities to represent and promote the dairy industry and its products. In addition to the sessions for dairy royalty a special "Milk Messenger" session on dairy promotion was conducted for the adult participants by Cindy Weimer and Sharon Piano of A.D.A.D.C. – Mideast.

All of the young women in attendance assisted by their local dairy promotion committees and their families will spend the coming year representing the dairy industry and promoting the use of its products. They will visit school classrooms, conduct demonstrations in grocery stores and malls, speak at meetings of farmers and non-farm audiences, write news articles and participate in radio and T.V. interviews.

Occasionally they will also be found riding in parades and handing out awards at county fairs. It will be a busy but rewarding year for all as they do their part to contribute to the well being of the dairy industry and the health of its customers.

In September, the county princesses will compete for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess or Alternate. The State Pageant will be held at the Sheraton Inn, Harrisburg, on Saturday evening, September 19. All interested person are urged to attend and support their local candidate.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program, now in its 42nd year, is supported by Pennsylvania dairy farmers though American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Middle Atlantic American Dairy Association, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council-Mideast/Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and Allied Milk Producers in addition to contributions from independent dairies, cooperatives, and individuals.

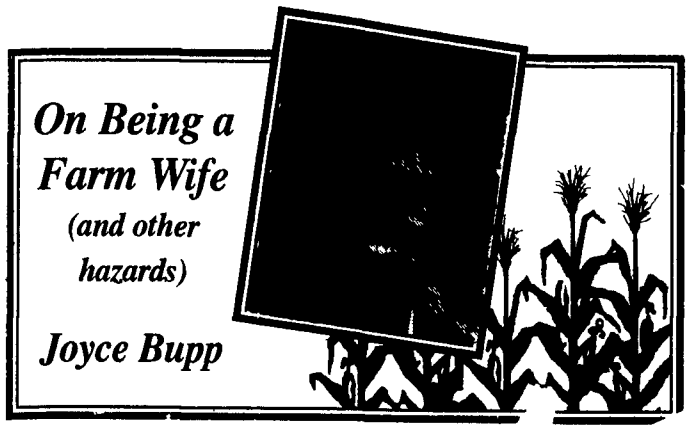
Homestead Notes



A soft, subtle fragrance permeates the house.

(No, not skunk. That one still wrinkles our noses on occasional evenings, but at least two of the local skunk babies have sadly met their fate on the roads through the farm).

This far more pleasant scent drifts steadily across the road and through the office and kitchen, nudged by gentle breezes floating down the hill. Early morning and late evening dampness, as well as the showers that have blessed the neighborhood recently, enhance the delicate perfume.

August aromatherapy. The fragrance of pollinating corn.

Aromatherapy is very trendy right now, an emphasis on enhancing one's well-being by creating an enveloping environment of psyche-soothing smells.

The perfume of pollination reeks of a crop in the making, of winter feed for livestock and grain to market And that's pretty soothing to farmers. This delicate olfactory pleaser is a fleeting sensation, vanishing as the ripe, receptive corn stalks quickly brown toward maturity.

More August aromatherapy has replaced the usual summertime damp and slightly-mildewy scent in our old house's cellar.

Fresh local peaches from a neighboring orchard are carefully laid out side by side in a flat cardboard box, cushioned with plastic grocery bags and covered to hasten their ripening in the cool environment. The old kitchen towel blanketing them also discourage those pesty fruit flies.

Peaches began ripening earlier than usual this year, but must have picked up extra flavor with their speed. They are absolutely delicious, some of the sweetest I remember eating in years. The only "down" side of earlier peaches is that they may not stretch out as long into the fall. Thus, we must concentrate on gobbling lots of 'em while they're so deliciously available.

Another fruity scent hangs around a small bush in the back yard shrub border. Our lone blueberry bush has failed to grasp the concept that blueberries bear best with a couple of friends around for pollination. It went ahead and singlehandedly populated itself with lots of berries, which have been ripening over a couple weeks. I refrigerated several handfuls of these favorites of The Farmer until there were enough to create a really special August Aromatherapy, the smell of blueberry cheesecake baking in the oven.

But others hanker after the plump, lightly-scented blueberries.

Before I realized last year why the mockingbird was perpetually hanging around the border, it was too late. Every blueberry on the little bush had been devoured. By then, all I could do was be aggravated at myself. And buy blueberries.

One recent morning, I spied the mockingbird, tentatively hopping around in the grass, cocking its head from side to side, checking out the blueberry bush from a distance. That bush is encased in a tangle of nylon netting this season, salvaged from one of the big round bales we feed to the heifers.

So, the score thus far for this year: Farmers 1, Mockingbirds 0.

But, the thwarted, noisy bird is spending more and more time on the electrical wire above the garden, where the August aromatherapy of ripening cantaloupes is drifting upward. Would mockingbirds eat cantaloupes?

Just in case, I'm encouraging the presence in the garden of an all natural, anti-bird-scent source.

Here kitty, kitty, kitty.....

Largest Nutrition Grant

ROBBINSVILLE, NJ — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced that Pennsylvania's Department of Education received a $249,951 grant, the largest of 17 competitive grants awarded to individual states, to help the states promote nutrition education and healthy foods in the school cafeteria, the classroom and the community.

The 1998 Team Nutrition Grants provide training and technical assistance to school food service staffs, as well as local-level grants for schools to use to establish cafeteria-classroom links to support healthy eating messages for children.

"School food service staffs are the key to delivering healthy school meals for children," Glickman said. "these grants represent some excellent ways to link food, nutrition and health to other classroom lessons."

Pennsylvania's award-winning project proposal will document the successful implementation of USDA's School Meals Initiative in two model schools using videos, teleconferencing, and the development of a best practices manual based on the schools' experiences

Team Nutrition Training grants were first awarded in 1995, and to date, USDA has awarded 72 grants to 84 states, totaling $14.1 million.

He Loves Me, He Loves Me Not

To some "he loves me, he loves me not" may be the musings of a teenage girl about her beau, but to many children it's a painful questions that they ask about their parents or their brothers and sisters. When "baby makes three (or four)," the family suddenly has all the makings for war under one roof.

Sibling rivalry has existed since the beginning of time and the experts don't even suggest that we try to end it. Rather, they encourage parents to understand it and to take positive steps to manage all the rollercoaster feelings that they and their children feel when energy and attention must be shared.

Sounds easy, but it isn't. I think if you ask parents, the gut reaction is to forbid fighting when their kids start bickerin about who called the front seat first. Adults tend to force apologies and demand sharing when arguments over the computer or a toy erupt. And the results aren't satisfactory. Parents are hungry for the magical medicine that will calm the sea of pushing, tattletaling, fury-causing "looks," and unspoken competition.

Into that sea, come Adele Faber and Elain Mazlish, authors of Siblings without Rivalry, with some insight and encouragement.

Interestingly, these authors have found that when sibling fighting is entirely forbidden, the children grow up also not having a relationship with one another. Somehow in bickering, children are also bonding and learning social negotiation skills. That's why experts advise parents not to have the unreasonable goal of eliminating rivalry but rather of managing it (or helping sons and daughters manage it) better.

Faber advises, with low level bickering, to simply let it run its course. When the argument escalates, however, adults should intervene.

First, speak directly to the children's feelings, "Boy, you two are furious with each other!"

Noticing their feelings actually reduces the intensity of the anger. Finally someone is noticing their pain.

Second, listen to each person's position on the problem. "One at a time..." "Oh, you wanted to use the computer because your promised to send your friend a note as soon as you got home." "Oh, you wanted to use the computer to finish your homework and you can't wait because your favorite TV show is coming on TV and you have to have your homework done before you watch TV."

Third, acknowledge the complexity of the problem. Say to them, "Wow, this is a very difficult situation. Both of you want to use the computer right now for different things."

Fourth, give them permission to think up a solution. "I have confidence that you can come up with a solution to the problem that is fair to you, [child's name] and also fair to you, [sibling's name].

According to Faber, it's important to stress that the solution must be fair to both. Otherwise, the older, stronger, savvier child comes up with the solution, and it really doesn't feel fair to both.

Finally, leave the room with a short comment. "If you want to you can tell me what you come up with." Try to not let them follow you and draw you back into the problem. Expect silence. After some awkward moments, the children will usually timidly venture into solving the problem.

Brothers and sisters truly do have the capacity to solve problems, but parents need to set the tone and give messages about how they believe in the kids and value their combined skills.

"Stop it. What is there to fight about?" "Why can't you share, etc.?" "Now neither of you can..." "Give it to her, she's younger" "You're making me crazy. Wait until you have children of your own, you'll see." are all rather ineffective ways to respond. Faber also says, calling "Hey, you two, work it out!" from a neighboring room is also ineffective. An adult's physical presence, personal listening, and then clear directions gives children the structure they need to move ahead and work through an argument.

This is an important lesson It tells a child that both avoiding the fight and screaming and bullying their way to victory are not good choices. Instead fair negotiation is the best way to handle differences. Wouldn't it be great if adults took the time to tackle grown-up problems in the same way?

My, How Child Care Has Changed

It seems like yesterday that I was growing up on a farm in north central Pennsylvania, but it isn't.

I am a parent with adult children—oh, my, how the time does fly.

I especially remember as a child, how fortunate I was that my Mom was always there. Typically, we had breakfast before I departed for school and a snack was always available when I returned. My sisters and I would call Mom and there was always an answer. We were the most fortunate, our parents worked side-by-side creating a livelihood for our family. That was more than 40 years ago, and today many things are different.

Today's family is faced with difficult choices about work as well as child care. To keep pace with the financial demands of most families, two paychecks are often necessary. That means at least two individuals are working outside the home. If there are children in the family, then the choice of who and where child care will be provided must be made.

If I was granted just one wish; I wish that all families could choose what is best for their family, based on their many needs, through conversation and thought, and public support.

This means a couple of things. First, for those families who choose for a parent to stay at home to provide child care, our government must recognize and value this service by providing tax relief through an appropriate avenue. Second, for families working outside the home, there must be affordable, accessible, quality child care based on the freedom of choice.

Did you know that in Pennsylvania, anyone caring for more than three children must be licensed or registered with the PA Department of Public Welfare? There are different types of child care options available:

- Licensed Centers — Providing care for more than 12 children at any given time.
- Group Day Care Homes — Providing care for 7 to 12 children at any given time.
- Family Day Care Home — Providing care for 3 to 6 children at any given time within the provider's home.
- Néighbor/Relative Care — Providing care for fewer than three children at any given time within the child's or provider's home.

The difficult choice is selecting the child care option which best meets your family's needs. What is the best setting? Who is the best provider? What is the best location? If you would like some ideas to consider when selecting child care, you can contact your county's Penn State Cooperative Extension Office and request the checklist for choosing child care or work through the following.

Take three steps before placing your child with any child care provider.

1. Visit the home or center.
2. Carefully look around.
3. Ask lots of questions.

Here are some things to look for and ask about:

_____Can you visit any time your child is there? Do you feel welcome?

_____Are the caregivers warm, friendly, and clean?

_____Do the caregivers have experience with children? What kind?

_____Do the caregivers treat each child as a special person?

_____Do the caregivers listen and talk to the children?

_____Does the caregivers' approach to child rearing agree with yours?

_____Do caregivers encourage self-help, independence and self-expression?

_____What do the caregivers do when a child is angry or fearful?

_____Is the home or center registered? If not, why not?

_____Is the home clean and comfortable?

_____Is there a fenced-in play area outside?

_____Are all poisons, medicines, and sharp objects stored in a locked area?

_____Is the home or center free from mess or clutter?

_____Is there a first aid kit readily available?

_____Are emergency numbers posted next the the telephone?

_____Is there a room for active and quiet play?

_____Is there a planned program of activities?

_____Are healthy, nutritious snacks and meals served?

_____When are naps taken? What do children sleep on?

_____Are toys, books and playthings available to the children?

_____Are toys clean, safe and in good working condition?

_____Get references from other parents who now have or had children in the home or center.

_____Is this a place I'd like my child to spend the days of his/her life?

During or after your visit, if you have the feeling something isn't quite right, KEEP LOOKING. Trust your feelings. Don't place your child in this home or center.

CAUTION — Remember you're hiring a substitute parent to care for your child, not just a babysitter!

Yes, times have changed and although selecting child care may seem like a tedious process it is worth it. When you are working outside the home, you will feel comfortable knowing your children are receiving the same or better care if you were providing it yourself.

Ag Department Kicks Off New Program

CHESTER (Chester Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. and Secretary of Aging Richard Browdie recently kicked off the Senior Farmers Market Nutrition program at the Chester Senior Center.

The program provides eligible Pennsylvania seniors with checks to purchase Pennsylvania-grown fresh fruits and vegetables at their local farmers market through September.

"In Pennsylvania, we produce high-quality fruits and vegetables, and we believe our seniors should be able to enjoy them, too," Hayes said. "Health experts recommend five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily for good health, and this new program is another way we can help keep our elders healthy and able to enjoy all of Pennsylvania's bounty."

Secretary of Aging Richard Browdie said, "Exercise and a nutritious diet are vital components of healthy aging. Our PrimeTime Health wellness promotion program, which is offered in Chester-area senior centers and statewide, affords seniors the chance for learning proper exercises techniques. Now, with this Senior Farmers Market Nutrition program, older persons have a wonderful opportunity to maintain a healthy diet by purchasing home-grown fruits and vegetables in season."

Seniors who are 60 years of age or older who live in the City of Chester and the surrounding communities of Ashton, Chester Township, Edystone, Marcus Hook, Parkside, Trainer, Upland, and Lower and Upper Chichester are eligible to participate.

The following markets will accept the Farmers Market Nutrition program checks: Chester Community Farmers Market, at the Trinity United Methodist Church parking lot, Ninth and Kerlin Street, Chester, open noon to 4 p.m. every Thursday; and Linvilla Orchards Farm Market, 137 West Knowlton Road, Media, open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

The Rockview State Correctional Institution's farm operation also will supply an additional farmers market site — location and hours to be announced — with fresh fruits and vegetables. The checks will be accepted only at these markets.

The $5 checks are available to Chester Senior Center members at 721 Hayes St., Chester. Non-Chester Senior Center member, living in the City of Chester and surrounding eligible communities, may pick up checks on Wednesdays, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., at the Chester Senior Center.

For more information on this new pilot program, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Food Distribution at 1-800-468-2433.

Dress It Up

Salads are a wonderful solution for a light lunch or supper during summer months. A simple dressing can transform the taste of salad and make a difference on whether or not family members will love it.

Forget the salad dressings that line grocery shelves. Make your own—free of additives and much tastier. With today's blenders, choppers, and food processors, making your own salad dressing has never been easier.

Customize dressings to fit your family's taste. Eliminate ingredients such as garlic if your family doesn't like the aftertaste. Add fresh herbs from your garden. Substitute a different oil. Try seasoned vinegars.

Here are some recipes to spark your culinary creativity to make the best salad dressings, you've ever had.

2 cups mayonnaise
½ cup chopped parsley

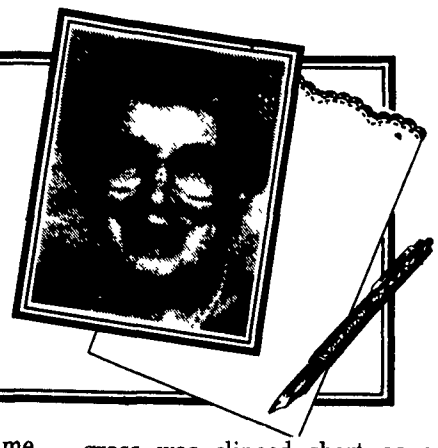
Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser



Summertime is picnic time. My family has a tradition of getting together each summer. In the 70s we celebrated my father's birthday and my uncles at the same time in July. It was always held in our meadow beside the slow flowing Conestoga. At that time the grass was clipped short as a lawn by my father's sheep. There were many trees along the bank and a small fireplace for roasting hot dogs.

Today the meadow is criss-crossed with electric fence to keep some 90 heifers where they belong. The land has eroded along the bank and most of the trees have fallen over. People no longer swim at the nearby beach as we did at that time.

On Sundays in the 1950s our meadow had many cars parked in it as folks came to fish and also for a place that the children could swim. We charged the large sum of 25 cents for each car that drove into our meadow.

When the picnic was for my husband's family of brothers and cousins, we used the flat-bed wagon as a table. It certainly could hold a lot of food as folks came from as far away as Delaware.

This year the family picnic will be in a Community Park. There will be play equipment nearby for the children who now come from as far away as Georgia. It will not be the tranquil setting that we enjoyed years ago. But, the important factor is the people who attend.

Peach Rhubarb Jam

2 quarts fresh or frozen rhubarb, cut into 1-inch pieces
4 cups sugar
3 ounces orange Jell-O
21-ounce can peach pie filling

In a large bowl, combine rhubarb and sugar, allow to stand overnight. Transfer to a large saucepan, bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Meanwhile, dice peaches in pie filling, add to mixture and return to boiling. Remove from heat. Add orange Jell-O; stir until dissolved. Spoon in freezer containers. Cool completely. Makes about 7 pints.

Thanks to Joyce Stuff, Mercersburg, for sending in a recipe that she writes is old and looks and tastes like strawberry preserves.

Rhubarb Preserve

5 cups sugar
20-ounces crushed pineapple

Mix together rhubarb, sugar, and pineapple and boil 20 minutes. Add and boil one minute:

6-ounce box strawberry Jell-O

Pour into jelly jars and seal.

ANSWER — For Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, who wanted recipes to use in a Plett pan, here are some from Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill. She writes that plett or platt stands for a Swedish pancake, a very thin type of pancake usually used for desserts.

To season the cast iron pan, coat with shortening or other salt-free shortening, place in 350-degree oven for one hour. Let pan cool on a cake rack or let pan cool in oven as oven cools for at least 3 hours. Now the pan is ready to use.

Mix recipes for pancakes (plattars). Heat plett pan on top of stove, coat each indentation with non-stick spray.

Drop batter into indentations and wait until bubbles occur all over and edges are set. With a fork, gently slip the tines under the edges of the pancake and quickly lift up to flip it. It's tricky but it works. Use butter between pancakes and stack.

Serve with lingonberries or red currants or cranberry sauce. Top with whipped cream.

Note: Lingonberries are native to Sweden so blueberries or other berries can be substituted.

Plattars

3 eggs
1¼ cups whole milk
¾ cup all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt

Beat eggs until thick and lemon colored. Sift together dry ingredients, add dry ingredients to egg mixture.

Drop by tablespoons onto moderately hot griddle (plett pan). Spread evenly to make thin pancakes. Do not overcook. Pancakes should be a light brown, then turn.

Spoon melted butter and sprinkle a small amount of sugar over each cake stacked. Makes 52 pancakes.

Lingonberry Sauce

Combine in saucepan:
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch

Stir in:
4 cups berries
1 cup water

Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens then starts to bubble. Cook one minute longer. Serve warm or cool over plattars or waffles. Yields 5 cups sauce.

Note: Pancakes can easily be made on a regular fry pan or griddle and it doesn't take away from the appearance.

It's a great summertime supper for a large family. Enjoy.

ANSWER — Elaine Fyock, Windber, wanted a recipe for oven pickles processed in the oven at a low temperature and left set overnight appeared in this column, but she mislaid the recipe. Thanks to Brenda Young for sending in a recipe her family likes.

1 teaspoon dill seed

Bring the following to a boil:
1 quart water
1 cup vinegar
¼ cup uniodized salt
3 teaspoons sugar

Rex begonias are a popular foliage begonia strain, best grown as a pot plant. They bear heat-shaped leaves that appear off-centered. Thick rhizomes creep over or under the soil surface.

A relative, the rieger begonia, is raised for its flowers. It has single or double camellia-like flowers with thick fleshy roots, rieger begonias are easy to propagate.

Gardeners can raise a new Rex begonia plant merely by snipping a leaf or two from the mother plant. The Rex begonia has cells capable of rooting in the veins of its leaves as well as in its stems.

Choose a mature leaf, because young, tender leaves wilt too easily and old damaged leaves invite insects and disease.

Be sure to start out with a clean container. Any shallow pan that can hold a few inches of sand will work well for propagation, a clear plastic sweater box with a transparent lid works particularly well as a mini-greenhouse.

Using a sharp knife or razor, cut off the leaf at the base of its stalk. Slice the leaf into wedges. Each wedge should have a vein in its center and a piece of the sinus (the place where the leaf and the stalk meet) at its tip. Dip the narrow end in the rooting hormone. Sink the wedge into the sand so that a third of it is buried and the remainder stands upright like a sail. Gently firm it into place with your fingers. Place the wedges about 1 inch apart to allow room for growth.

Cover the box and set it on the sill of a bright east or west window. Maintain a day and nighttime temperature of about 65 degrees F. Water when the medium is dry to the touch. In a few weeks roots will begin to form. In about 2 months, several leaves per wedge should begin to emerge.

When the leaves on the plantlets are about the size of your thumbnail, repot it into a 2 1/2-inch container using a light soilless mix. Put the newly potted plants in a warm east window. a humid environment, and water when the soil surface is dry.

Even with care, Rex begonias tend to be short-lived. They often last one year under ordinary room conditions.

Propagators often grow the rieger begonias from seed. Six months is required from seed. One they start blooming they bloom for a long time. Look for 16 flower colors including rose, pink, orange and red. Non-stop orange and non-stop red are popular hybrids.

Avoid growing in extremely low light. Grow indoors in a shady spot. The plants stop growing especially during winter months. Allow the soil to dry only slightly between waterings.

If plants stop blooming, restart it by cutting back to within 3 inches of the crown.

Baseball Players Find Cows Got Milk

CLARION (Clarion Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, WARM Radio and the Scranton Wilkes Barre Red Barons teamed up recently for a successful Dairy Night at the Ballpark.

A crowd of over 7,000 watched as Danny Held, first baseman for the Barons was victorious in the pre-game milking contest and shortly thereafter delivered a home-run for his team.

"Homer Hankies" bearing the Got Milk logo were distributed by local Dairy Princesses to all fans and were much in evidence each time they approved of the Baron's on-field performance. Got Milk signs greeted all comers and the message was flashed repeatedly on the scoreboard throughout the game.

Eileen Murphy, Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess, delivered the first pitch and was on hand to greet fans at the front gate. Dairy T-shirts were awarded throughout the evening to holders of lucky number tickets.

Cows for the milking contest were provided and led by Roger Sherwood and his family of Long Brook Farm, Meshoppen.

Other milking contestants were Rob Neihart of WARM Radio, Tony Barrien of the Red Barons and Greg Reis of the Columbus Clippers.

A ninth inning hit by the Columbus Clippers concluded the game with a two-run loss for the Barons leaving them believing the entire team should have milked the cows and consumed the milk for better luck!

Remove from heat and gently stir in the butter and vanilla. Pour into a baked 9-inch pastry crust, chocolate or graham crust. Chill completely. Garnish with whipped cream and fresh berries or pineapple if desired.

Catch The Bug

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — You've heard of disco dancing, but did you ever hear of disco bugs dancing beneath a disco ball?

The DJ (disc jockey) calling the songs is a locust and a centipede is break dancing.

Well, the bugs aren't actually dancing except in the imagination of a group of 8- to 9-year-old boys, who created the scene with their bug collection.

Damon, Cornell, William, Terrance, Elibevei, and Miquel completed the project as part of a contest sponsored by Lancaster County 4-H Extension.

Paula Marshall, the 4-H urban summer assistant and biology major from Lebanon Valley College, organized the project named Catch the Bug.

She used a $300 grant from United Way to organize a summer day camp and to buy nets and other supplies for about 150 inner city children.

The children were divided into smaller groups. The first week they went to the county park and caught bugs with nets.

"It was great fun," said 8-year-old Damon. He and his friend Cornell want to be biologists. They borrow books from the library to learn about bugs.

Eight-year-old Rosa said that she caught bugs and put them in cans. She fed them and watched how they acted. With her group, she caught a caterpillar, butterflies, crickets, and a king centipede.

A few of the children were a bit wary of touching the bugs, but most found it exciting.

Paloma, who is also 8 years old, said that she caught a daddy long legger.

The children preserved the bugs and stuck pins in them so that they would dry out until the following week.

On the designated day, each group had to create a scene for their bug collection.

It took some give and take because each group member had a different idea of what they could do with the bugs. Some wanted to create a bug ranch, others a bug heaven, some wanted to put cows in the meadow with bugs. Pipe cleaners, pom poms, wall paper, string, and glitter were some of the different items available to use.

The room hummed with chaos as the children worked together on their projects. When the hour was up, amazingly each group had an original entry that showed creativity and talent.

Now it's Paula's job to judge the entries. She said, "I'll look at everyone's boxes, take notes and decide which ones take a first or second place. Next week each child will receive either a blue or red ribbon depending on the group they were in."

Paula wasn't a 4-H member when she was growing up. She said, "I wish I had known about 4-H. It offers so many opportunities. We need to publicize 4-H more and this is one way kids learn about 4-H."

Contact your county extension office if you would like to join a "Catch the Bug" project or other 4-H clubs.

Bug Brats irritate cows in the meadow.

The Jungle is crawling with snakes and bugs climbing on bushes, trees, and floating in the swamp.

Summer 4-H assistant Paula Marshall admires the creativity of the 4-H'ers.

The Insectors used pipe cleaners and pom poms to show off their bug collection.

Disco Bugs has a centipede break dancing beneath a disco ball. A locust stands in as the DJ.

ADADC Scholarship Deadline Looms

The Leo Briggs Memorial Scholarship is available to any collegiate individual who has promoted the dairy industry by exhibiting leadership in dairy industry organizations Founded in 1983, the scholarship was established as a tribute to Leo Briggs for his superior leadership within the dairy industry for over 30 years.

A second $500 scholarship, the ADADC Memorial Scholarship, is available to former dairy princesses from ADADC's marketing area. The applicant must have completed one year as a dairy princess and one year of college, and must be pursuing a career in dairy product marketing, dairy manufacturing, home economics, ag communications, or journalism. The scholarship is offered in memory of several ADADC staff and board members for their contributions to dairy promotion.

Both college scholarships are based on grade-point-average, extracurricular activities, future plans, and a 400-word essay discussing the applicant's commitment to a career in the dairy industry. Application deadline for both scholarships is Friday, November 6.

Scholarship applications are available through agricultural colleges in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, or by calling the ADADC office at (315) 472-9143. Both scholarship will be presented at the New York State Dairy Princess Pageant held in Syracuse, February 1999.

ADADC oversees the management of the scholarship accounts; however, neither scholarship is funded by dairy farmer check-off dollars. As a result, outside donations are critical to ensure the future availability of these scholarships Any person or organization wishing to make a donation to either scholarship may do so by sending a check to: Joanne Tills, 219 South West Street, 100, Syracuse, NY, 13202-1205, payable to ADADC.

Maryland Dairy Princess Exposed To Dairy Industry Through Babysitter

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

FREDERICK, Md. — Erin Feuillet, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Jean-Pierre and Donna Feuillet of Damascus, Montgomery County, is the new Maryland dairy princess. Erin was presented with her tiara by outgoing princess Emily O'Hara at the 37th Maryland Dairy Princess Coronation held here at the Holiday Inn.

Four young ladies, all serving terms as regional dairy princesses, vied for the state title. Feuillet represented Montgomery and Howard Counties and Southern Maryland as the South Central dairy princess. Erin Kernan, the Upper Chesapeake dairy princes, was named the alternate Maryland dairy princess. Erin in the 16-year-old daughter of Eugene and Pamela Kenan of Parkton, Maryland. Also competing in the contest was April Enlow, the Allegany-Garrett dairy princess April is the 18-year-old daughter of William and Kristen Enlow of Friendsville. Jennifer Seiss, the current Frederick County dairy princess, also participated in the contest. Jen is the 18-year-old daughter of Glenn and Nancy Seiss of Rocky Ridge.

Erin Feuillet will be a sophomore at the University of Maryland this fall, where she is majoring in agriculture and resource economics. In the future, she says, she would like to add a double major in marketing. She said she would like to eventually work for an association marketing milk.

"My interest in dairy marketing was started a long time ago," said the dairy princess, "It intensified when I was South Central dairy princess."

At college she is a member of her student union marketing committee.

She has raised and shown Jerseys for the past 10 years, and has success at the county, state, and national levels. She has also been active in dairy judging, and her involvement in judging has taken her to Madison, Wisconsin for the National judging competition, where her team placed fourth overall. She won the R.N. Whipp judging award for two consecutive years.

Erin said she first got involved in dairy projects through her babysitter, who lived on a dairy farm. "My babistter since I was six months old was on a dairy farm," she explained, "So I got involved that way. I always helped on the farm." That was with the Marty and Geraldine Stiles family at their Hidden Valley Farm in Damascus. Spending time at Hidden Valley Farm, Erin developed a love of Jersey cows. She was able to keep her animals there, caring for them each day when she visited the farm.

Erin Feuillet, the new Maryland dairy princess.

Her interest in agriculture has led to a 10-year career in 4-H, where Erin has been a member and held leadership roles in the Damascus 4-H dairy club, the Montgomery County junior Jersey calf club, the Montgomery County sheep and swine club, and the Montgomery County beef club. She is also a 10-year member of the state junior Jersey club, where she has been a secretary.

In other awards presneted at the evening gala, outgoing Maryland dairy princess was honored for her oustanding scrapbook. Miss Congeniality went to alternate state princess Erin Kernan, whose radio spot was also selected the best in the show. Erin Feuillet was awarded the Francis Kepler Memorial Scholarship, and was honored for the best skit of the evening.

Three judges had the hard job of selecting dairy royalty. Deanna Rose, of Southhampton, Pennsylvania, is a member of the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Council. Lolly Lesher of Bernville is a returning judge who is a dairy farmer and sells dairy products at a farmer's market in Washington, D.C. The third judge was Nathan Stiles, a retired Jersey breeder from Boonsboro, Maryland. Master of Ceremonies was Jeff Myers of Westminster, Maryland.

Recipes, Tips, Hints From Letie

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — With gardens overflowing with summer squash, tomatoes, cucumbers, and other summer vegetables, cooks are always seeking taste-appealing recipes to use up the bounty.

Alletta Schadler, home economist, presented some wonderful ideas at a workshop held at the Lebanon County Extension office on Monday morning.

Growing in popularity are roasted vegetables.

"Roasted vegetables have a wonderful flavor and are easy to make," Schadler said as she demonstrated how she prepares the dish. "Baking time depends on the vegetable and the size."

Longer cooking vegetables such as beets, carrots, mushrooms, onions, parsnips, potatoes, rutabagas, turnips, and winter squash require 30 to 60 minutes baking time.

Medium cooking vegetables such as eggplant, fennel, garlic cloves, okra, bell peppers, chilies, summer squash, tomatoes, and zuchinni requires from 15 to 30 minutes baking time.

Quick cooking vegetables such as asparagus, corn, lima beans, peas, and string beans bake in 10 to 15 minutes.

You can mix vegetables with different cooking times, but you must either cut the longer cooking vegetables into smaller pieces or add shorter cooking vegetables after the longer-cooking ones have baked awhile. Be careful, vegetables that are cut into too small of pieces will turn to mush.

Roast vegetables until they are fork tender and brown. Shake or stir the pan a couple of times as they bake.

Toss with oil to coat or spray with oil to prevent drying out and giving a golden brown surface.

Here are the directions for a great combination. However, you can add or subtract vegetables and change the seasonings according to your family's tastes.

BROCCOLI, ORANGE, AND WATERCRESS SALAD

2 medium oranges or 1 can Mandarin oranges
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
1 teaspoon horseradish
1 teaspoon honey
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cups small broccoli flowerettes
¼ cup thin slices red onion
2 cups trimmed watercress

Peel and section oranges over bowl to catch juice. Remove membranes and set sections aside. Drain oranges.

Add the oil and next four ingredients to orange juice. Stir well, set aside. Steam broccoli covered for 1½ minutes or until tender crisp. Rinse under cold water and drain well. Add broccoli, oranges, onions, and water cress to the orange juice mixture, toss well. Divide evenly between two plates.

Another dressing idea:
¼ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon cornstarch or Clear Jel
½ teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon brown sugar

Combine ingredients, boil for 1 to 2 minutes, stirring until thick and clear. Cool 5 minutes and serve over Broccoli, Orange, and Watercress Salad or on spinach salad.

Home economist Alletta Schadler demonstrates new cooking techniques for vegetables during a recent workshop held at the Lebanon County Penn State Extension office.

ROASTED VEGETABLES

Red potatoes (red potatoes hold shape better when cooked) quarter and leave peel on for extra fiber.
Carrots, chunked
Squash (zucchini, yellow, or pattypan) sliced
Egg plant, chunked
Mushrooms
Onion, chunked
Garlic cloves (mild and flavorable when roasted)
Basil oil or oil and flavoring preferred.
Crazy salt.

Preheat oven to 400-450-degrees. Combine all vegetables and seasonings in a dish and coat thoroughly with oil. "But be stingy with oil—it adds 120 calories per tablespoon," Schadler said.

She suggests using about 2 tablespoons oil for every 4 cups veggies.

Spread vegetable mixture into a single layer on a shallow baking dish. Roast vegetables until fork tender.

When cooked, vegetables can be dressed with a vinaigrette dressing and a bit of grated cheese or crumbled Feta cheese.

GRILLED VEGETABLES
Quick Method

Brush or spray vegetable or olive oil on vegetables such as peppers, mushrooms, eggplant, onions, corn zucchini, yellow squash. Place on rack of grill. Be sure grill rack is clean and not crusted with remainder of meat cooking. Grill over high heat uncovered until tender.

Although recipes can always be found in magazines and cookbooks, the neat thing about attending a workshop is that new products are often introduced, cooking and food preparation tips interspersed with instructions, and participants can sample the recipes.

Some of the new products Schadler introduced included:

• Reynolds Hot Bag, which are large heavy duty aluminum bags to use on a grill to steam vegetables.

• Jane's Crazy Salt, a seasoned salt made with a variety of herbs.

• A gadget used to pour in oil and used as a vegetable spray.

Some of Schadlers tips included the following:

• The larger the seeds of egg plant, the more it tends to be bitter. No amount of doctoring can change a bitter eggplant.

• Zucchini and summer squash are interchangeable in recipes.

• Toasted walnuts stay crisper longer in salads and are flavorful.

• When you combine oil and vinegar, it separates unless combined with a emulsifier such as mustard.

•For an easy and lower fat viniagrette to use on tossed salads: Combine one part oil with three parts vinegar. Add garlic salt or 1 tablespoon salad herb mixture. This can vary greatly in taste according to the vinegar and oil used.

White wine vinegar is mild and doesn't overpower other tastes.

Rice wine vinegar is mellow.

Red wines vinegars vary greatly but can be heavily flavored.

Balsamic vinegar can be combined with other vinegars. Canola oil and extra light olive oil are most popular for salad dressings.

• Sanitize countertops by combining 1 tablespoon Clorax with 1 quart water. Store in a spray bottle and spray countertops with it when cleaning up.

Here are some more recipes using summer vegetables. Additional recipes and instructions for canning and freezing summer produce is also available at your county Penn State Extension Service.

New Royalty Named At State Grange Camp

HOWARD (Centre Co.) – Being named Junior Prince or Princess is a great honor.

And with that honor goes privilege–the privilege to serve your fellow man as representatives of the Pennsylvania State Grange

This is part of the job description that David Sattazahn and Nichole Blair, the 1998-99 Prince and Princess, look forward to fulfilling

"If you have a goal to be prince or princess and you are willing to ge through the process of being selected," Sattazahn, the 13-year-old son of Dennis and Betsy Sattazahn of Berks County, said "Then you have the great privilege to be prince or princess, and you get to have a good time too."

"I think it is important to be princess so I can get more people involved and let the 13- and 14-year-olds know how great it is to be princess and how much of an honor, too," Blair, the 14-year-old daughter of Thomas and Sandi Blair of Perry County, said

Blair, who is master of Perry Valley Jr. Grange #507, has also served as secretary lady assistant steward, treasurer, ceres, chaplain, and overseer

Sattazahn, who is overseer at Marion Jr. Grange #344, has also served as lecturer, steward, assistant steward, and treasurer.

Both said Grange is an important part of their lives.

"You get to meet new people, live a whole new type of lifestyle at camp, get together with kids from different parts of the state and have a great time," Blair said, when asked what she would tell non-Grangers about why it is important to join the Grange.

"It is a great organization," Sattazahn said, in response to the same question, "and you can become a better person."

Sattazahn, an eighth-grade student at Conrad Weiser Junior/Senior High School, plays baseball, basketball, football and street hockey, collects sports cards and enjoys reading. He is also active in 4-H and Student Council at school.

Blair, a ninth-grade student at Newport High School, plays the clarinet, softball, basketball and volleyball, is active in her church's youth group, and enjoys bike riding, and camping.

First runners-up were; Shelly Reppert, Virginville, Berks County and Nick Fishovitz, Big Knob, Beaver County.

Other Princess candidates, their home Granges and county were: Vicki Kieffer, Marion Junior Grange, Berks County; Marci Schaeffer, Pioneer, Berks County; and Rebecca Vonada, Logan, Centre County.

Other Prince candidates were: Andrew Kieffer, Marion, Berks County; Jeff Ruckert, Big Knob, Beaver County; and Doug Sattazahn, also of Marion Grange, Berks County.

Junior Grange Princess and Prince are Nichole Blair and David Sattazahn.

Junior Grange Campers Find Road To Throne No Easy Journey

HOWARD (Centre Co.) — Most Junior Grange campers dream of being prince or princess.

And for one boy and girl, that dream does come true.

But before you can wear the sash, you must prove that you are among the best that the Grange has to offer.

That's why the road to the "throne" is a grueling five-step journey—to ensure the chosen two are worthy of representing the Pennsylvania State Grange as Junior Royalty.

You are invited to come along on this journey as the judges decide who will be the 1998-99 Junior Prince and Princess.

Step 1 - The written test

Let's face it, few of us like tests—especially if you re a 13- or 14-year-old on summer vacation.

But on the second day of Grange camp, 28 teen-agers found themselves doing just that—answering a total of 100 true/false, multiple choice, matching and fill-in-the-blank questions plus three tie-breaker questions.

As if taking a test wasn't bad enough, they had to do it as 38 campers swam, played Frisbee, or just hung out and talked with friends during free time at Bald Eagle State Park.

"The test was pretty easy, the only thing that bothered me was the wind," Nick Fishovitz said. "I made the court last year and I would be pretty mad at myself if I didn't this year."

The wind, blowing 10 to 20 m.p.h., was an added distraction. In fact, the two sheets of one camper's test blew off the table and came apart.

Others, however, were bothered more by the difficulty of the questions.

One girl couldn't believe how hard it was, exclaiming to a friend, "I was like 'what!' when I saw some of those questions."

State Junior Grange Director Deb Campbell said the written test is used to select the court, which is the five boys and five girls with the highest test scores.

"This is one of the largest groups I've had take the test during my six years as camp director," Campbell said. "We had so many we had to divide them into two groups. I think it is really great that we have so many 13- and 14-year-olds."

Later that day, several com-

Lindsie Bennet reacts emotionally shortly after being named Female Youth Ambassador while Male Youth Ambassador Adam Britcher is all smiles.

The theme of Youth Camp '98 was Renaissance Faire, and several campers decided to wear period costumes.

Youth campers play some get-acquainted games as they attempt to be the last team whose water balloon hasn't burst.

Grangers learn about patriotism as the flag is retired after another day comes to an end at Youth camp.

Grange Youth Ambassadors Take Responsibility Seriously

HOWARD (Centre Co.) — When Lindsie Bennett and Adam Britcher are together, the longtime friends admit to being able to make the other one laugh.

That's one of the benefits of friendship.

But the laughter ends when asked why they wanted to be the 1998-99 Youth Ambassadors for the Pennsylvania State Grange.

"I've always wanted to do this," Britcher, the son of Paul Jr. and Deb Britcher of Newport, said. "I really enjoyed being the Junior Grange Prince and that was the main motivation in trying to become the male youth ambassador."

Bennett has an even more personal reason to be youth ambassador. She is dedicating the coming year of her ambassadorship to her father, who was recently killed in an automobile accident.

"I told my father before the accident that I was going to go for it," Bennett said, her voice cracking with overwhelming emotion. "He knew how much this means to me and I know he is up there watching over me."

With both hailing from Perry County — Britcher is a member of Community #1767 while Bennett belongs to Perry Valley #1804 — their friendship has grown during this difficult time.

"Many Grangers have been there for me," Bennett, the daughter of Edith Lesh and the late Donald Bennett, said. "These people are family to me and we're all very close."

"We're all friends and we all spend time together, so we'll continue to be there for her," the 17-year-old Britcher, a senior this fall at Newport High School, said.

Now, as these Grangers recover from this tragedy, the coming year brings a promise of fun times, with plenty of laughter, as they represent the youth program at various State, Subordinate and Pomona Grange functions.

Some highlights of their duties include attending the 1998 State Convention in Crawford County, the 1999 Pennsylvania Farm Show, the '99 Royalty trip and the 1999 National Grange Convention in Portland, Maine.

Both ambassadors are active in their respective Granges.

Bennett, who is a junior at Cabrini College majoring in Elementary and special education, is the Lady Assistant Stewart (L.A.S.) in the Youth Corps, and has served as overseeer, lecturer, steward, assistant steward, L.A.S., gatekeeper, Ceres, Pomona, Flora and on the executive committee in the past.

Britcher is the temorary assistant steward in his subordinate grange, and has previously served in all the offices of the Junior Grange.

When asked what state office they would run for if given the opportunity, Britcher said he would like to be Master while Bennet said Flora.

"I think it would be great to be involved in the policy-making process for the Grange and plan the major events in the Grange," Britcher said.

I'd lilke to be Flora because it is really neat to put on the sixth degree and demonstrate the beauty of the degree," Bennett said. "We are one of the few states to still do it."

As part of running for youth ambassador, contestants are asked: "What new or innovative promotional ideas/programs/contests would you recommend or create to increase youth participation across the state?"

Bennett answered that she would create a program where teams from across the state competed against one another in ritual and drill work.

Britcher said he would like to see a Pomona Grange created for youth members.

Besides the Grange, they are involved in other activities as well.

Britcher's hobbies include reading, training race horses, rock hounding (hunting) and throwing shot and discus.

Bennett enjoys softball, field hockey, basketball, and being with her friends.

Other female members of the court and the Grange they representd included: Ashley Campbell, Perry Valley #1804, Perry County; Vickie Gundling, Lakeside #152, Susquehanna County; Ann Kieffer, Marion #1853, Berks County; and Denise "Denny" Zug, Walker #786, Juniata County.

Male court members included: Jeff Bishop, Big Knob #2008, Beaver County; Nathan Campbell, Perry Valley #1804, Perry County; Paul Elliott, Hookstown #1980, Beaver County; William Schlemmer Jr., East New Castle #1536, Lawrence County.

FRESH DILLED GREEN BEANS

1½ pounds fresh green beans
½ cup olive oil
¾ cup green onions, minced
3 tablespoons fresh dill weed, minced or 1 tablespoon dried
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
Pinch salt
Pinch coarsely ground pepper
⅓ cup radishes, diced
⅓ cup walnuts, chopped

Remove strings from green beans and wash thoroughly. Cut beans into 1½ -inch pieces. Cook green beans, covered, in a small amount of boiling water 6-8 minutes or until just crisp and tender. Drain beans and set aside to cool.

Combine next 10 ingredients in a jar, cover tightly, and shake jar vigorously. Pour over beans and toss well. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Just before serving, stir in radishes and walnuts. (If left set, vinegar will cause radishes to bleed).

Serves 8.

LETIE'S FRESH CORN CHOWDER

1 cup chopped celery
1 large onion, chopped
1 cup chopped carrot
½ cup chopped sweet pepper, red or green or pimento
1 to 2 cups diced red potatoes with skins left on 4 cups chicken broth or chicken bouillon/water to make this amount
2 cups chopped broccoli or zucchini pieces (optional)
3 to 4 cups corn, cut off cob
3 cups milk
½ cup flour or Clear Jel
8 to 10-ounces grated four cheese combination or orange American cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook celery, onion, potatoes, pepper, and carrot in chicken stock until tender. Add the broccoli and corn, cook until tender. Mix the flour or ClearJel and milk. Stir into the vegetable mixture to thicken. Bring to a boil, stirring occasionally. Stir in the grated or sliced cheese and let stand for cheese to melt. Add the parsley and serve. This reheats well. It may thicken up. If so, add some extra milk to thin if preferred. Eat with whole grain bread and fresh fruit and you've got a tasty and healthy lunch.

ANSWER — Mabel Diller wanted to know how to remove brown discoloration from antique china. Thanks to Marian Mosemann, Summit Hill, who writes that sometimes old dishes absorb food stains. If this is the problem, simply soak the dishes in raw milk or acidopholis milk overnight.

If the stains remain, they are not caused by food. The browing of the china was caused by putting the china in the oven.

For many years this was a practice of wood stove owners. The food needed to be kept warm, so the wife usually placed the dishes in the oven until food was to be served. There is nothing to do to reverse the damage. Usually the china beneath the glaze (which is crackled) absorbs the heat of the oven and causes the brown discoloration.

Brown spots on antique china such as Flo Blue or other china valued for its age does not take away from its resell value. The discoloration gives us its time frame and a history of its use.

mittee members graded the tests and another committee member and a guest at camp regraded them Tuesday morning to ensure their accuracy.

With scores ranging from 74 to 97 percent, the court was introduced as their names were randomly drawn out of a hat following lunch on Tuesday.

The court (listed here in alphabetical order starting with the girls' name, their Junior Grange and home county) included Nichole Blair, Perry Valley, Perry County; Vicki Kieffer, Marion, Berks County; Shelley Reppert, Virginville, Berks County; Marci Schaeffer, Pioneer, Berks County; and Rebecca Vonada, Logan, Centre County.

Prince candidates were: Nick Fishkovitz, Big Knob, Beaver County; Andrew Keiffer, Marion, Berks County; Jeff Ruckert, Big Knob, Beaver County; and Dave and Doug Sattazahn, both of Marion, Berks County.

There was no time to celebrate, however; immediately following the announcement came the next and most frightening round.

Step 2 – Impromptu question

This, undoubtedly is the most nerve-racking portion of the contest

"The impromptu question is definitely the hardest," 13-year-old David Sattazahn said. "Going into it you don't have much time, you're in front of your peers and you're afraid that you might mess up in front of all those people looking at you."

Following the announcement of the court, they were quickly ushered outside the dining hall where they were told that they would answer in the same order as their name had been selected.

One by one, each contestant must enter the dining hall, walk to the microphone and, in front of about 90 sets of staring eyes, give an answer to an unknown question.

Despite the nervousness that filled the air, it quickly became evident that these kids do, indeed, have the qualities the judges are looking for as they answered the question: "What problems do you see in the world today, and how can we make them better?"

Answers varied from a need for more recycling to ending poverty and starvation and how the Grange could play a role in addressing these problems.

One problem, however, seemed to be on their minds more than any other: violence.

"Kids with guns and using them in school," Rebecca Vonada said. "Maybe we need more strict gun laws or do a better job of informing kids about the consequences."

"Drugs and gangs," Nichole Blair said. "We need to get the guns and weapons and knives off the street. We should use the Grange, our schools and the community in general, to provide activities to keep kids from hanging out on the streets."

"The biggest problem I see is all the fighting that is going on in the world," Jeff Ruckert said. "I can try and do something as an individual, but as a group, it would be nice if we would work together to help each other out and get along with one another."

Pretty heady stuff from kids who, for the most part, were trying to fight back the butterflies in their stomachs.

It is all over in a few minutes – but those few minutes seem like an eternity.

Step 3 – The group interview

Unlike the impromptu question, this round is a "rap" session with Campbell to allow the court to share their feelings about important issues in a relaxed atmosphere. As the director asked the questions, the group sat in a semi-circle and answered her informally and very politely. Based on the answers the campers gave at the impromptu session, Campbell decided to follow up with the issue of violence in today's society.

Vicki Kieffer felt that the media was partly to blame for being too negative and suggested that they offer some of the better things occurring in our communities.

Doug Sattazahn, as did several others, said the Grange should sponsor activities for youths because the ones who get in trouble "have too much time on their hands."

Dave Sattazahn, Doug's twin brother, said youths should join the Grange instead of gangs as they seek acceptance from their peers.

With three of the five judging categories behind them, the court had a 24-hour reprieve before the next round.

Step 4 – Individual interviews

This is arguably the easiest, and therefore, the most enjoyable of all the categories

During recreation time on Wednesday morning, each court member sat down with three judges to answer six questions about themselves, their non-Grange activities and how they would involve juniors at the subordinate Grange level.

Two contestants said they enjoyed the individual interview because it offers them the opportunity to "let their hair down" and be themselves.

"I liked the individual interview those most," Shelley Reppert said. "I felt relaxed and that allowed me to give confident answers."

"All in all, I'd say they were pretty relaxed," junior committee member and judge Kelly Van Ord said. "We told them that we had a couple of questions for them and to simply relax and answer them to the best of their ability"

As the end finally appears on the horizon, there is just one more stop on the journey

Step 5 – The essay question

Interestingly enough, one of the six questions during the individual interview was also the question for the 500-word written essay. This happened because Campbell selected the essay question while the three judges were required to come up with two questions for each individual interview.

The question?

"What do you think about being required to wear uniforms to school?"

As might be expected some supported the idea and listed their reasons while others felt it hurt individuality and freedom of speech.

"More said 'yes,' they should wear them than said 'no' and that was kind of surprising," Van Ord said. "But I don't recall anyone saying they wanted to wear them."

Two committee members read essays to three judges as the judges ranked each one on a scale of 1 to 5 with 5 being the very best During steps 2-5, the judging is performed the same way. Two court members could score, say a 4 out of a 5, in a particular category. All four categories are tallied, plus the judges' preference, and the boy and girl with the highest scores are the new prince and princess.

(The judges' preference is factored based on several criteria including the contestants' behavior during camp, attitude and how helpful they are to others at camp.)

With the judging over, all the campers can do is wait for the coronation pageant on Friday night.

As the time ticks by and Thursday gives way to Friday, those pesky butterflies return

By Friday afternoon several contestant say they are nervous, but would be happy for whomever the new royalty is because they are all such close friends.

Statements like that make you wish you could give the prince and princess title to all the candidates.

But, alas, only one boy and girl get to live the dream

As the pressure mounts, the evening meal give way to dressing up for the pageant

Finally, the big moment arrives and the court is formally introduced as a boy court member escorts a girl to the front of the stage at camp chapel.

Following a short program that includes handing out the awards and other recognitions, it is time for the big moment. All the studying for the test, the unrelenting nervousness of the impromptu question and a week of building excitement comes to a dizzying crescendo as Campbell tears open the envelope to announce the winners.

ARENDTSVILLE (Adams Co.) — For a year Adams County 4-H members worked on projects to bring to the annual fair held Aug. 1 at the South Mountain Fairgrounds near Arendtsville.

And on this day the air was charged with anticipation as some 300 youngsters, from Carl Wilkinson, 12, of Aspers, who hobbled on crutches as he led his calf into competition, to Katie Baldwin, 10, of Biglerville, who was proud to show off her two-month-old Nubin/Alpine goat, took part in the event.

Carl broke his leg in a three-wheeler accident a week before the fair.

This year the youths benefited from the largest of 31 area businesses, which donated all of the items in the restaurant from food to paper products so that all of the money collected could be used for the 4-H Senate Exchange Program trip to Colorado next summer. Youths from Colorado visited the Adams County 4-H members this year.

Colored Wool Growers Hold Six-State Show

NEW DERRY (Westmoreland Co.) — The Derry Agricultural Fair in New Derry was the site of the annual show for Region 5 Natural Colored Wool Growers Association held recently. Region 5 is made up of members from the six states of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, South Carolina, and Virginia.

Sheep clinics, wool and sheep competitions, shepherds' leadline, and a Civil War reenactment were some of the highlights of the July 6-11th event.

Here are some pictures of people who made this event a success.

costume contest.

Karen Nicholson of Gettysburg, the goat club's leader, said 14 youngsters are members of the group. While she noted that there is a huge market for goat's milk, most of the club's members seem to enjoy their animals as pets.

One noted they make great lawnmowers and another said they act as a watchdog.

Katie Baldwin agree, explaining that she now has goats because her brother Brian had one as a pet. Standing in a long red dress with white ruffles and looking at her goat which she had put in identical garb, Katie decreed her animal was now named Princess Pepper Ann for the costume contest. She, you see, had become Princess Katherine. Behind her was Hans Solo. And next was a shepherd... and a soccer player.

The goat club youngsters hard work was rewarded with a bit of whimsy.

Kori Shows 'Rosie' To Market Champion At Schuylkill Fair

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — Overall market lamb champion exhibitor of the Schuylkill County Fair liked the name "Rosie."

Perhaps it had something to do with a visit to a friend's dairy farm not too long ago. The friend's name, who lives near Bernville, is, of course, Rosie.

But champion exhibitor Kori Morgan insists she just likes the name.

Kori, 12, daughter of Kim and Craig Morgan, Pine Grove, showed her 118-pound Hampshire/Suffolk crossbred ewe to grand champion of both the open and 4-H shows Tuesday at the Schuylkill County Fairgrounds.

The Blue Mountain seventh grader is a four-year member of the Schuylkill County Stampede 4-H Livestock Club. The ewe was named after a friend, Rosie, also in the club, who lives on a dairy farm in Bernville.

Kori's mother, Kim, said that Kori spent some time on the Bernville dairy farm in July. "Kori got an eye-opening experience about the hard work on a dairy," Kim said.

Kori had a banner day at the fair, capturing champion showman and sweeping the championship in the market 4-H and open show. She won champion ram a couple of years ago at the fair.

Judge Bob Leib from Mechanicsburg liked the heavy middle weight champion shown by Kori. The Rambouillet and Southdown

Fair Queen Looks To Possible Career In Travel, Business

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SUMMIT STATION (Schuylkill Co.) — Newly crowned Schuylkill County Fair Queen Jennifer Jenkins may one day find a way to combine her love of travel with business.

Jennifer, 17, daughter of Michelle and Barry Jenkins, Pottsville, was selected queen at the fair last Saturday.

Jennifer was excited to be selected queen of the county fair. But what the Pottsville High School senior remembers with equal enjoyment are the voyages she took with the Salvation Army in May 1997 with a group of 50 people with the brass ensemble to visit Norway and Sweden.

There, she toured 14 cities in two weeks, visiting the countryside, meeting the people, and playing French horn in parades.

"We played in a different city every day," she said. "We drove all day and performed all night."

The literal "whirlwind of a tour" taught Jennifer, who has been attending her county fair every year, a lot about the people, customs, and traditions overseas.

Jennifer would sometimes travel back and forth from the countries, doing parades and shows for two hours at a time. It was the first time she was on a trip of that magnitude, but she came back with pleasant surprises about the way Scandinavians eat, dress, and live.

Jennifer said she'd like to live over there. What impressed her most was the way Scandinavians dress.

"They're kind of old-fashioned," she said. The people dress in festival clothes, mostly handmade. "I love the sweaters. They are all handmade," she said.

Jennifer enjoyed driving through the countries, especially the mountain tunnels.

The Swedish and Norwegians enjoyed speaking to the group, showing a lot of interest in things American. Jennifer was surprised to see that those overseas "do the same things we do," she said.

Jennifer has spoken about her experience overseas. She related to her Pottsville High School speech class what she saw — including how differently the Scandinavians eat.

"They eat sandwiches at every meal," said Jennifer. The Swedish prepare their sandwiches using one slice of hard bread. "They always place half of a grape on top." They also eat a lot of cheese.

"I'm a big cheese eater too," Jennifer said. "I like all kinds of cheese."

No, they don't serve American cheese in Sweden or Norway, according to Jennifer.

But she'd gladly go back to visit again.

"I'd return," said the fair queen. She said the people on the streets are friendlier.

Jennifer has not decided exactly what college or degree she would pursue, but it would definitely have something to do with travel and business.

She enjoys all the events at the fair. Since Jennifer was younger, she has enjoyed all the games in the Kids' Area.

A tradition at the Schuylkill County Fair is to choose a princess to accompany the queen at ribbon-presenting ceremonies.

Scarlett Hester, 10, daughter of Judy and Rick Hester, Schuylkill Haven, was selected princess at the fair. Scarlett is in the fifth grade at Pine Grove Middle School.

sheep breeder and Cumberland Valley High School ag teacher said he liked the profile of the lamb, which had the length and loin required by the industry.

Kori showed a lamb that "will put out the largest percentage of loin chop" of those in the class, Leib noted.

The reserve shown by Cindie Geary at 127 pounds, second place in the heavy middleweight class, was a real "well-made lamb," said Leib. The purebred Suffolk ewe was shown by Cindie, 18, daughter of Joan and Keith Geary, Pine Grove.

Cindie is a graduate of Blue Mountain High School and plans to attend Wilkes University to study pharmacy. This is her first championship at the fair.

Kori Morgan also won champion of the open market lamb show, from the heavy middleweight division.

This is the first time Kelly has shown at the Schuylkill County Fair. Kelly has recently shown at the Sussex County, N.J. Fair, at Kimberton, and plans to show at the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) and the state Farm Show.

Moments before showing her Hampshire/Suffolk ewe to supreme champion in showmanship, Kori Morgan listened carefully to instructions from her mother, Kim. Her mom "told me to set up the lamb, keep it closer to the judge," said Kori.

Reserve champion was shown by Elizabeth Cornman, Pine Grove.

In the fitting contest, taking a lot of time in grooming and cleaning the sheep helped Josh Eifert, Cressona, receive the blue ribbon. Josh, 17, is the son of Ted and Glennis Eifert and is a sophomore at Blue Mountain High School.

Reserve of the show went to Briana Shealer, Auburn.

There were 32 exhibitors and 103 animals at the show. Following is a list of show placings.

Wet Hay Can Cause Ohio Barn Fires

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Extremely rainy weather in some parts of Ohio may be pressuring farmers to store hay that is still wet, a dangerous situation that can cause barn fires, said Ohio State University specialists.

Barn fires in west-central Ohio resulted in losses of property and livestock this summer, apparently after wet, stored hay burst into flames from spontaneous combustion. In another case, a fire erupted when an electrical spark ignited hay dust.

The most common cause of hay fires is when the crop is stored wet, causing microbial action that can generate internal bale temperatures well above 150 degrees, said forage agronomist Mark Sule, Ohio State University.

"After a certain point of heating from the mold growth, other chemical reactions begin to take place, and it raises the heat to a point where the hay can burn," Sule said.

In general, hay is considered too wet for storage if moisture levels are higher than 20 percent in small rectangular bales, higher than 18 percent in large round bales, and higher than 16 percent in large square bales.

To be sure, farmers can use one of a number of commercial moisture sensors and probes to test hay for moisture content, Sule said. These sensors are most accurate when put into the bale while it is in the baler chamber. A farmer can also use a microwave oven to determine moisture content. Refer to Ohio State FACT Sheet AGF-004-90, Using a Microwave Oven to Determine Forage Moisture," also available online at (http://ohioline.ag.ohio-state.edu/agf-fact/agf-004.html).

However, the persistence of rainy weather in some parts of the state are giving farmers limited choices when they harvest the crop this year, Sule said. "In some places great hay is being made, while other places are getting rained on a lot."

One tactic is to use chemical drying agents that can speed up the drying of legume hay, especially during the summer months, Sule said. These chemicals are applied to the crop stand as it is being mowed, he said.

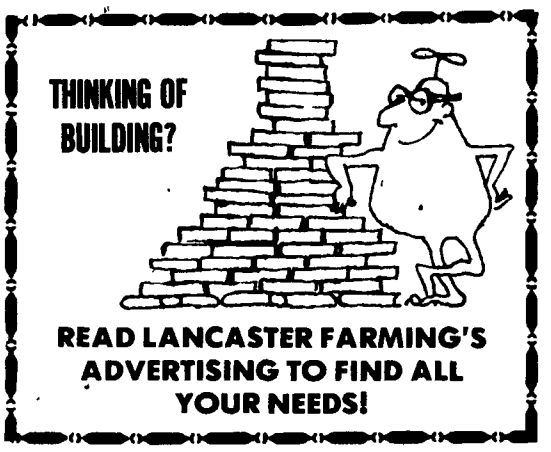
Another tactic is to use hay preservatives that allow hay to be labeled at higher moisture content without excessive storage losses, Sule said. A sensor on haymaking equipment can efficiently regulate the application rate according to the moisture level of the hay during harvest. A uniform coverage is essential, he said. However, preservatives are not effective on hay with moisture levels above 30 percent.

If equipment is available, the farmer might think about using alternative harvesting methods for high-moisture hay. "Under poor drying conditions, put it up as haylage or baleage," Sule said. "These are other options to go to during periods when only a one- to two-day wilting period is possible."

In addition to wet hay, fires can be caused when an outside source, such as an electrical spark, sets off high levels of hay dust in the air, said agricultural engineer Rick Stowell, Ohio State University. These conditions are similar to those that cause grain elevator explosions. However, these kind of fires are less frequent than those caused by wet hay.

Modern farm buildings are constructed of metal roofing and siding, but that should not lull farmers into thinking they are any more fireproof than traditional wooden structures, Stowell said. "Once A barn fire gets started, it's very hard to contain," he said.

Farmers can also limit the potential damage of a fire by planning in advance, Stowell said. New buildings should not be attached to existing structures unless absolutely necessary. The separation of structures keeps a potential fire confined to a single building.



Endorse Proposal

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Members of the Land O'Lakes and Countrymark Co-op boards of directors have strongly endorsed and unanimously approved a proposal to unify a majority of the cooperatives' farm supply businesses.

The plan will be presented to members of both organizations for their approval.

"Throughout our discussions with Land O'Lakes we have carefully considered ways by which we might provide greater, long-term value for Countrymark Co-op members through an expanded cooperative system. We have focused on the strengths of our respective businesses, which together will stretch from coast to coast, and we believe the proposed unification will benefit our combined membership," said Jeff Stroburg, president of Countrymark Co-op.

Jack Gherty, president and chief executive officer of Land O'Lakes, said, "Combining businesses witih Countrymark Co-op is an important strategic step for Land O'Lakes. As a 77-year-old market driven cooperative, our history reflects many unifications that have shaped and molded and enhanced this organization. With the boards' support and member approval, this unification will move Land O'Lakes into the eastern corn belt region, add important critical mass to our system and strengthen our core feed, seed and agronomy businesses.

The two cooperatives will provide members with comprehensice information on the proposed unification prior to member- voting, which will take place during August. If approved, it is expected the unification would be implemented October 1, 1998.

Holloway, Douglas Top Bred And Owned Limousin Show

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Limousin's growing National Limousin Bred and Owned Show highlighted July 15 in Springfield, Ill. as exhibitors led out heifers and bulls in front of judge Alan Petzold of Canute, Okla.

In what has become a popular event at the National Show and Congress and a showcase of youth breeding programs, the Bred and Owned Limousin Show encourages members of the North American Limousin Junior Association to become involved in producing their own cattle as well as showing them. As a reflection of their commitment and breeding programs and supported by the Breeder's Cup Committee, exhibitors of the grand and reserve champion females and the grand champion bull are awarded pregnant recipients carrying some of the breed's top genetics.

In the female show, Jonathan Holloway of Chattanooga, Okla., took Division III cow/calf pair and grand champion honors with CHR Liza May 211F, a 5/23/96 daughter of DFLC Triple Play, and her 4/7/98 heifer calf sired by KRMC High Joker. Mike Anderson of Garner, Iowa had the Division II champion and reserve grand champion female with GMAL Sydney 760G, a 4/16/97 daughter of SLVL Stout.

In the bull show, Lisa Douglas of Miami, Okla., led out the Division II and grand champion bull with LISD Blitz 60G, a 1/28/97 son of COLE First Down. Daniel Gasperson of Mountain Grove, Mo., had the Division II reserve champion and reserve grand champion bull with Honey's Red Rocket 201G, a 5/29/97 son of Wulfs Rambler.

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve, Dale, and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms - Lowville, NY

Mr. Farney is talking about mixing 11.5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration."

The Farney's herd average is up about 1,000 lbs., and they have a higher protein test as well. They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor.

3000 Reel Auggie TMR Mixers
Now available in seven sizes
with capacities from 147 to 600 cubic feet

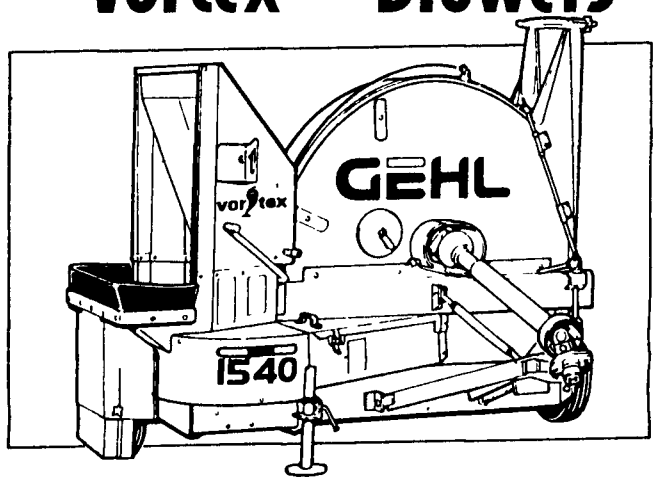
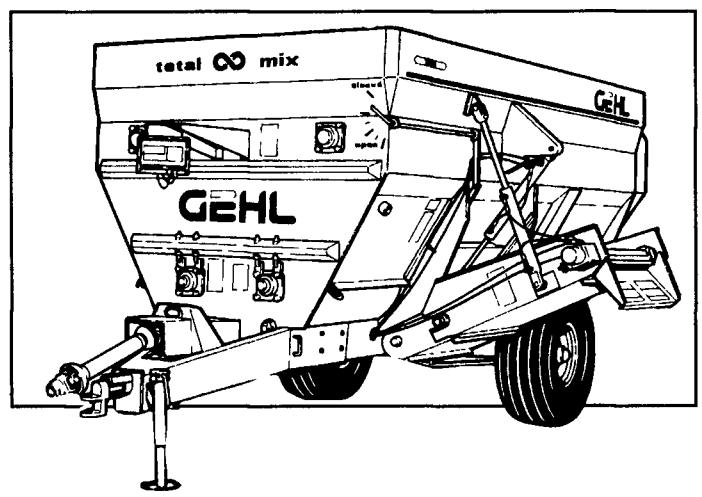
"Vortex™" Blowers



If you need a high-capacity forage blower to fill your tallest silos, Gehl Vortex blowers will help get your silo-filling done in short order

- Three models - Your choice of 540 or 1,000 rpm operation
- Twin spinners - Rifle material into the blower fan at nearly 35 mph
- Twin-sided fan disc - Paddles on both sides shoot the crop up the pipe in nearly continuous flow
- Split rim sheets - Feature a replaceable inner liner for longer life and lower maintenance costs
- Many convenience features - Swing-away blower outlet, air vents, adjustable left tire, right tire guard, wide hopper, removable tunnel covers and duals water inlets

TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and mositure content

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers.
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capcities

Conservancy Announces Award Winner

PITTSBORO, N.C. — Did you know that more than 100 breeds of farm animals in American are endangered? For example, the Dominique, America's oldest chicken breed, very nearly became extinct no long ago.

The revival of this breed has been recognized by the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy (ALBC) in giving its 1998 Breed Conservation Award to Mark A. Fields, of Clark, Mo. The award is given in appreciation of Fields' conservation of several rare breeds of livestock, especially his work on behalf of the Dominique.

The American Livestock Breeds Conservancy, of Pittsboro, N.C., is a national nonprofit organization promoting endangered breeds in 10 species of livestock and poultry. ALBC's Breed Conservation Award was established in 1995 to recognize individual contributions to the survival of rare breeds.

Award recipients are honored for significant accomplishments, which can include raising herds and flocks to assure continuity of a breed, establishing breed associations and registries, and promoting breeds to the public. These vital efforts are not often rewarded by grants or other financial support, and only rarely are universities or other institutions involved.

This year, ALBC honors Mark Fields for his exceptional leadership in the conservation of the Dominique. This breed, also known as the "Domenecker," was widely used and celebrated throughout the 1800s. It became rare after 1900 when it was replaced by more productive breeds.

By 1970, there were only a handful of flocks left, and the Dominique's fate rested with a small group of breeders. In the last decade, however, the fortunes of the breed have improved. Today, there are more Dominique breeders than at any time since 1900, and the numbers of flocks are increasing every year.

Fields, now secretary of the Dominique Club, has not only encouraged the revival of breeding, using, and showing the Dominique, but he has also made a unique contribution to the breed with his authorship of a new book, "The American Dominique: A Treatise for the Fancier." Carolyn Christman, ALBC program coordinator, said, "Preserving a breed's history is an essential part of saving it for the future. This collection of 200 years of Dominique history is a written legacy from the past that will inspire and delight today's breed stewards. We wish that there was a book like this one for every breed."

Fields accepted the award at the ALBC annual conference in Farmington, N.M. in June. In his acceptance speech, he said, "We as a living generation have waited almost too late to save that which is valuable and that which is dear. My work with Dominique chickens, Mulefoot hogs, and White Park cattle has given me a great appreciation of how important our herds and flocks are, especially as the gene pool withing the commercial sectors is eroding. We must also have passion in promoting rare breeds in our communities, states, and across the country."

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

Product Helps Solve Hard Water Problems

CLEVELAND, Ohio — "Hard water" has always been a concern for homeowners, farmers, business owners, and industry. Although most of our nation's water supply is clean enough for drinking, much of it contains varying amounts of dissolved minerals, primarily calcium (lime), in the form of calcium carbonate.

Calcium scale buildup is responsible for clogging valves, faucet aerators, steam irons, coffee makers, and irrigation sprinkler heads. It reduces heat transfer in home water heaters, increasing energy costs and is accountable for elevated operation and maintenance costs in numerous industries.

In its untreated state, hard water forms a hard crystalline scale on surfaces, such as water pipes, reducing the interior diameter of pipes while reducing water flow and pressure.

Traditional water softeners, used to combat destructive scale, replace calcium carbonate with sodium chloride (salt) which is considered unhealthy for drinking. They also add salt to our groundwater, which endangers the environment.

Now there's SoPhTec, an amazing "Magnetic physical water conditioner" that controls and eliminates scale buildup without the use of chemicals or salt.

The SoPhTec System, designed for home use, consists of models C-500 and C-250, are small compact units that easily clamp on to most water source pipes. Other models are available for farm and industry use. SoPhTec utilizes specially configured magnetic resonance equipment to control and eliminate scale buildup. SoPhTec is not a water softener as it does not add or remove anything from the water. SoPhTec technology makes natural water, with all of its important minerals intact, act like "soft" water.

SoPhTec houses a powerful configuration of magnetic fields that eliminate calcium scale buildup by changing the physical characteristics of water. These magnet ic fields fracture the molecule clusters that encapsulize foreign particles in the water, allowing the calcium carbonates to float freely in solution through water, instead of clinging to the inside surfaces of water pipes. In other words, this amazing magnetic effect supercleans the surface of pipes and other containers, thereby reducing the extensive damage to these surfaces caused by the buildup of lime scale.

SoPhTec is easy to install, has no moving parts, and requires no maintenance or service. It saves energy in heating hot water tanks and saves money on soap, shampoo, detergents and swimming pool chemicals. SoPhTec is safe to use on lawns, shrubs, and fish ponds. It protects expensive plumbing, ceramic tiles and swimming pools from corrosion, algae, lime scale damage and, most importantly, is environmentally safe, using no harmful salt (as many people are watching their salt intake).

Company Introduces Finish Mowers

ROCKFORD, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company has introduced three new rear discharge (RD) finish mowers specifically designed for landscape and grounds maintenance professionals who need the flexibility of rear discharge mowers.

The new RD series includes the RD8400, RD7200 and RD6000, which offer cutting widths of 84, 72, and 60 inches respectively.

"In the design of the new RD series, Woods Equipment Company asked grounds maintenance professionals what they needed in a rear discharge mower," said Pete Officer, marketing manager for turf and grounds at Woods Equipment Company. "In direct response to this market research, our new series features a rounded front and tapered rear deck which allows a closer cut next to buildings and other obstacles."

Woods Equipment Company has introduced three new rear discharge (RD) finish mowers specifically designed for landscape and grounds maintenance professionals who need the flexibility of rear discharge mowers.

Another feature developed through market feedback was the removable chain shielding. Woods' RD series offers a five-bolt chain shielding across the back to act as a guard against thrown objects.

The quick-detach system allows for easy removal of the chain shielding to avoid grass clumping, yet still meets all applicable safety standards. The RD series meets applicable ISO and ASAE safety standards with or without the chain shielding.

The drive system includes several enhancements for heavy-duty durability and longer life. A cast-iron sheave with taper lock bushings results in longer belt life. Taper rolling bearings offer improved durability in high shock conditions.

The RD Series also includes interchangeable caster wheels that can be adjusted to the specific tractor size and set-up, while still remaining out of the tractor's way. A V-forward design keeps the mower at an optimal distance from the tractor.

Hesston Introduces Windrower

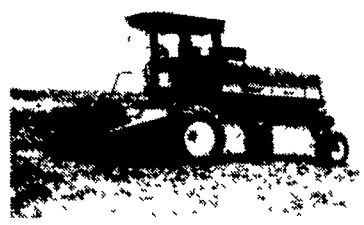
ATLANTA, Ga. — With the introduction of a new Model 8450 self-propelled windrower, Hesston has taken hay harvesting to a new level in power, capacity, and comfort.

Designed for customer operators, commercial hay producers, and large livestock operations, the Model 8450 is built for fast, high-volume cutting, thanks in part to more than 65 changes and improvements over the Model 8400 it replaces.

"In simple terms, the Model 8450 is a no-nonsense business machine that offers everything in the way of horsepower, dependability, and comfort that large-acreage operators have been looking for," said Ken Johnson, general marketing manager for Hesston products.

It starts with a deep-channel mainframe that provides the strength and stability to carry the machine through the roughest terrain. And to make sure it has enough power for any situation, Hesston equipped the 8450 with a 110-horsepower, turbocharged Cummins diesel engine and variable, two-speed hydrostatic drive.

A rear-tilting engine hood provides quick and easy access for both service and maintenance. Meanwhile, a 60-gallon fuel tank ensures plenty of diesel for all-day operation. There's even an access ladder and platform for quicker and easier refueling.



Designed for customer operators, commercial hay producers, and large livestock operations, the Model 8450 is built for fast, high-volume cutting.

That's because the 8450 stands a little taller than most self-propelled windrowers, allowing it to cross the tallest and widest windrows without disturbing the crop. The 37.5 inches of ground clearance is due in part to the use of 19.5x24 high-flotation turf or bar tread tires in the front and 14L x 16.1 tail wheels in the rear that adjust out to 120 inches for working in beds.

The most appealing amenities on the Model 8450, however, are found in the new Command-Center cab, which features 73 square feet of tinted glass and a panoramic, curved windshield. The wide, air-suspension operator's seat adjusts for height, fore/aft position, lumbar support, and personal back comfort for long days in the field. You won't have to reach for the controls, either. The entire console is attached to the seat and moves with the operator. Yet, it can be moved fore and aft or vertically in relationship to the seat for individual fit.

A single ergonomic control handle regulates ground speed and direction and includes switches for header tilt, reel lift, and speed and monitor selection.

Also attached to the console is another feature unique to the 8450 — an electric monitor that provides a wide variety of information and warning functions. In addition to visual and audible warnings for all engine and transmission functions, the monitor includes visual warning for intake air restriction and turn signal indication. Computerized functions additionally include a lubrication reminder and monitoring of engine hours, engine speed, header speed, auger clutch slip, system voltage, header hours, acres harvested per hour, sub acres (resettable), and total header acres.

New Tractor Available

MIDDLETOWN, Del. — The first of the much-anticipated Case IH MX 170 tractor recently rolled off the assembly line in Racine, Wis en route to its final destination – Hoober, Inc. here in Middletown

Hoober got the jump on the competition, selling the first-ever MX170 to Jonathan Quinn of Warwick, Md According to Chuck Hoober, Quinn's Case IH dealer and head of operations at Hoober, Inc.'s Middletown location, the MX 170 is not a difficult piece of equipment to sell.

"We're thrilled to have sold the first MX 170s ever built," said Hoober. "And we anticipate selling a bunch more, because it is a tractor that delivers what our customers want."

Hoober cited the versatility of the MX 170 as one of the key factors in its popularity Quinn, who manages 1000 acres on his Warwick, Md. farm, plans on using the MX 170 in all aspects of his operation. Among the features that impressed Quinn the most were the MX 170's 145 PTO horsepower, outstanding lugging performance, the turning radius, and the design of the cab, which provides greater visibility and ease of operation.

Chuck Hoober, left, presents the keys to the new MX 170 tractor to Jonathan Quinn.

Both Quinn and Chuck Hoober were present as Quinn's MX 170 was unveiled at the Case IH facility in Racine, Wis. Case IH provided both with a tour of the Racine plant, where Hoober and Quinn were able to watch MX and Magnum series tractors roll off the assembly line.

"John and I were both very pleased with the Case IH plant and the facilities," said Hoober.

Chemicals, custom application, fertilizer, seed, seeding and soil testing are some of the products and services they've offered to customers in their six-state territory since 1975.

"We feel W-L Alfalfas offer the top performance and value that farmers demand," said Ag-Chem, Inc. sales representative Tom Mullineaux. "W-L is widely known for its quality alfalfas and we are pleased to make these W-L Alfalfas available to our customers."

For more than 30 years AgChem Service has sold and serviced a full line of agricultural, turf, and ornamental products for farms, golf courses, and lawn-care companies in Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York, Maine, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont

"AgChem Service wishes to provide the best products and services to our customers," said AgChem Product Manager Charlie Smith. "W-L Alfalfas have long been recognized as an outstanding line of alfalfas and we are pleased to include them in our product line."

W-L Alfalfas have won four straight grand-champion diary hay division, World's Forage Superbowl awards. Each winning variety was developed and produced by L-L Research, Inc at locations such as their Northeastern Research Facility, near Mount Joy, Pa.

"W-L is committed to develop better seed through research and that focus includes a strong commitment to the Northeast," said Kauffman.

Two W-L Alfalfas recommended for production in the Northeast are WL 324, a high-yielding variety with outstanding persistence and winterhardiness and WL 325HQ, a variety with very high yield potential, superior multiple pest resistance and outstanding forage quality.

Mr. & Mrs. Dairy Farmer:
Could you use better conception in your dairy cows?
Could you use more milk in higher peaks?
Do you have Johneys in your herd?

Liquid Vita-Power is in liquid form because liquid is more readily available to the dairy cow.

Liquid Vita-Power contains high levels of vitamins, enzymes and immune builders.

Tests have shown higher milk production, better breeding and helps to cure Johneys. The cost is no comparison to what it will make you. Feed at the rate of only 2 ounces per day.

10% Discount for 1st order.
